WESTFIELD IS CONTEST WINNER

Rushville and Shelbyville Tied For
Second Place on Points and
Per Cents Decide it.

PLACING LOCAL BOY THIRD

Oratorical of High School League
Furnishes First Chance to See
New Auditorium.

Landis M. Moore, of Westfield speaking on the subject, "The War and World Peace," won the oratorical contest last night, which was the closing event of the annual meeting of the Central Indiana High School League, Shelbyville was second and Rushville third.

Harry Schmalzel, the representative of the local high school, was barely nosed out of second position. He and Horatio Sexton, from the Shelbyville high school, tied on points and it was necessary for the judges to decide their position by per cent. Their points totaled seven each and their per cent totaled 272 and 270 respectively, giving Shelbyville the place by the narrow margin of two.

Ralph Nicholson of Richmond was given fourth place by the judges and Russell Williams of Sheridan was fifth.

The winner had a timely subject, and he gave his oration well. Although there are those who may have thought his presence was not the best of the five, his subject matter, coupled with his fine enunciation and convincing method of speaking, evidently won him first place in the minds of the judges.

Harry Schmalzel's subject, "The Power of Conviction," gave him a good oration on which to display his ability, and he did it well. It was believed that a slight hesitation near the opening of his speech cut down his grade. He was very convincing in his method of speech and his gestures were natural and timely.

Horatio Sexton, of Shelbyville, with the exception of the local orator, had the largest following in the audience and he was given a rousing ovation when he arose to speak. His subject was "Admiral Farragut." There were some persons in the audience who believed the honor would fall to Shelbyville after he had spoken. He also had the benefit of the last place on the program.

Ralph Nicholson who spoke first on the subject, "The New South," represented the Richmond high school. He was given next to last

HOLDS JOLLIFICATION MEETING OVER SUCCESS OF YESTERDAY'S EVENT HERE

High School This Morning Hears
Short Talks by Members of Faculty Student Body.

PRaised FOR CO-OPERATION

The high school held a jollification this morning over the success of the track and field meet and oratorical contest of the Central Indiana High School League here yesterday. Members of the faculty spoke and Harry Schmalzel, the contestant in the oratorical, expressed his appreciation for all the co-operation and help he had received.

Principal H. B. Wilson voiced the

SKULL THOUGHT FRACTURED

Carl Perkins, 10, of New Salem,
Thrown From Horse Today.

Carl Perkins, 10 years old, son of A. J. Perkins, of New Salem, was seriously and perhaps critically hurt this morning when the horse he was riding ran away and threw him on the road. The boy landed on his head and is believed to have sustained a fracture of the skull. He was rendered unconscious and still remained in that condition at a late hour this afternoon. He was taken to the horse to the blacksmith shop when the accident occurred.

CITY BEGINS ITS PART IN CLEAN-UP

Wagons Start Hauling Winter's Accumulation of Trash and Will Continue Rest of Week.

HEALTH SURVEY COMES NEXT

The city wagon started work this morning on the final lap of "clean up" week. The wagons started hauling from the northeastern part of the city and will gradually work westward until the entire city has been covered.

All of the alleys will be cleaned by the end of the week and then next week the city board of health will make a sanitary survey of the city. The city refused to haul anything that could be burned and would not touch ashes. It was pointed out that property owners should think enough of their own premises to haul away the ashes, that accumulated during the winter.

The offer of the city to haul away and aid in the clean up of the city met with response in all parts and it is believed that the city health board will find little to improve on when the sanitary survey is made.

DISTRICT MEETING TODAY.

The annual district meeting of the Daughters of Pocahontas was being held in Arlington today. Most of the afternoon was to be devoted to the registration of guests and at four o'clock the degrees was to be conferred on all past Pocahontases. The degree work will be conferred tonight by Larline council No. 296 of this city and Alfarata council No. 5 of Indianapolis. Grand officers of the Pocahontas and Red Men were expected to be present. Twenty councils in the ten counties of the district were represented.

good will of the high school faculty for the hearty manner in which the high school pupils had entered into the spirit of the meeting and made it a success. He said the experience would qualify the school for future events of the sort. He urged upon the pupils that this only be a starting point in oratory and athletics and that they keep up the work in these two lines.

Superintendent J. H. Scholl expressed his appreciation and that of the school officials for the splendid team work of the faculty and pupils. He said they were good losers and displayed the right kind of spirit.

Harry Schmalzel said he appreciated the support of the high

CROWD GROWS AS THE TIME NEARS

Forty Automobiles From Rushville
Are Promised For Trip to Greensburg Love Feast.

LIST IS GIVEN OUT TODAY

In Addition, Delegation Will be Augmented by at Least Fifteen at Milroy Friday.

That even a larger crowd than was estimated yesterday will attend the fourth district Republican love feast at Greensburg Friday evening, was the belief today. The committee has the names of forty automobile owners from Rushville and near vicinity who will go and who are making up their own parties. In addition, sixty tickets have been sold in the southern part of the county and it is known that several from Manilla will attend.

Fair weather is promised for tomorrow, and this it is anticipated, will serve to augment the crowd because a number have been holding back for fear that it would rain.

The banquet will be one of the big features of the love feast. It will take place promptly at six-thirty o'clock Friday evening. The tickets are selling at fifty cents each and when the supply here is exhausted, persons desiring to go may leave their names and fifty cents at Johnson's, Lytle's or Hargrove & Mullin's drug stores any time up to Friday noon and they will get a ticket on their arrival in Greensburg. This is an extra concession which has been granted to the Rush county delegation. County Chairman Fon Riggs will telephone the reservations to Greensburg.

A crowd of at least eight hundred Republicans will attend the banquet. The fourth district is anxious to outdo the other districts which have already held love feasts. Special excursions to Greensburg will be run from Columbus and Indianapolis and there will be a large delegation from the Columbia Club, Shelbyville will also send a delegation and there will be present approximately twenty-five Republican candidates for the nominations for the offices of United States senator, governor and the other state offices.

The auto caravan will leave the Windsor hotel corner promptly at four o'clock and will go by way of Milroy where it will be joined by the delegation from the southern part of the county. Those who have no way to go may see any of the following automobile owners who have consented to take their machines:

Chauncey W. Duncan, Fon Riggs, Tom Hiner, Albert Winship, Owen L. Carr, Will Jay, Walter Hubbard, Frank Capp, Frank Green, Hal Green, E. E. Polk, Theodore Abercrombie, Willard Amos, Will McMillin, Henry Schrader, Earl Winship, Charles Brooks, Theodore Reed, John H. Frazee, Elmer Humes, Walter Duke, Joe Cowing, Odice Jones, Ben Norris, Will Alexander, John W. Anderson, John C. Blackledge, Frank Abercrombie, Phil Wilk, W. R. Jinnett, Dr. J. C. Sexton, Albert Allen, Ray Lakin, Chester George, Paul Harris, Gurney Hinchman, P. A. Newhouse, P. A. Miller and Greely McCarty.

ADDRESS OLD SOLDIERS.

Rev. Daniel Ryan of Glenwood was here this morning, and completed arrangements for delivering the annual Decoration Day address to the Old Soldiers. The Rev. Mr. Ryan will deliver the address on Monday, May 31 in the assembly room of the court house.

Public on Suffrage, Prohibition and Child Labor Questions.

GRAY AGAINST FIRST TWO

Franchise League Proposes Not to Endorse For Re-Election Those Opposed to Measured.

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—The Woman's Franchise League of Indiana has tabulated the records of the congressmen and to be ready when they apply for re-election to oppose them or endorse them according to the stand they take on bills in which women are interested. The record in detail follows:

Senator Kern (Dem.) Not voting on suffrage amendment.

Senator Shively (Dem.) Not voting on suffrage amendment.

1. Lieb (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but favor child labor bill.

2. Cullop (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

3. Cox (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

4. Dixon (Dem.) Against suffrage prohibition but for child labor bill.

5. Moss (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

6. Gray (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

7. Korbly (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

8. Adair (Dem.) For Suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

9. Morrison (Dem.) Against suffrage, against prohibition and not voting child labor bill.

10. Peterson (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

11. Rauch (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition, but for child labor bill.

12. Cline (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition and for child labor bill.

13. Barnhart (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, and not voting on child labor bill.

The women call attention to the fact that all save Korbly of the Seventh district, and Peterson of the Tenth, are returning to the next congress.

TEVIS WILL GIVE ADDRESS

Rushville Minister Selected Educational Day Speaker.

Dr. V. W. Tevis of this city will deliver the address at the annual county educational day exercises which will be held in the auditorium of the Graham Annex Wednesday, June 2, it was announced today. Approximately one hundred and fifty, eighth year graduates will receive diplomas. One hundred and thirty passed the examination and the thirty who failed will be given another chance Saturday.

The Orange high school commencement was held Tuesday night, the class address being delivered by the Rev. L. E. Brown of Connersville. The graduates were Marion Tittsworth, Lillian Houchins and John Creek.

ASKS FOR DESCRIPTIONS

Consul Frost at Queenstown Would Identify American Victims.

(By United Press.)

Queenstown, May 13.—Consul Frost today requested that relatives of Americans lost in the Lusitania disaster immediately file with the American consulate here thorough descriptions of the persons missing. The request was conveyed in a dispatch to Ambassador Page at London.

"Reports have been brought to me that several fishing crafts have sighted floating bodies," said Consul Frost.

CAN MEET ON BASIS OF AMERICAN NOTE

This Reported to be the Opinion of the German Embassy at Washington Today.

IS PLEASED WITH ITS TONE

(By United Press.)

Washington, May 13.—The German embassy believes Germany and America can meet on the basis of the American note if outlines of the note's contents as printed today are correct. The German embassy does not say so officially. Ambassador Bernstorff refused to talk other than to issue an absolute denial of statement purporting to reflect the embassy's views. This alleged statement declared Germany's reception of the American demands would be a suave but firm refusal to accept the conditions laid down.

Beyond the denial, the ambassador refused to go on, saying "The matter is now between the two governments." From sources close to the embassy it was possible to gather definite assurances the German representatives in Washington are pleased with the tone said to be taken in the note.

BRITISH WARSHIP SUNK BY TORPEDO

Goliath is Sent Down in Dardanelles
and Loss of Life is Placed at Five Hundred.

OF SAME CLASS AS THE OCEAN

(By United Press.)

London, May 13.—The British warship Goliath has been torpedoed in the Dardanelles, according to an official announcement from the admiralty this afternoon. The admiralty placed the loss of life at five hundred.

The Goliath was a 12,950 ton battleship of the same class as the Ocean, sunk inside the Straits on March 18. On the same day the battleship Irribible and French battleship Bouvet were torpedoed and sunk. The Goliath was 418 feet in length over all and 74 feet at her beam. She carried four twelve-inch guns and twelve six-inch guns and was considered a very formidable warsip. The Goliath was built in 1896. She had a speed of 18.2 knots and a complement of 750 men.

GERMANY MUST ACT NOT QUIBBLE

America's Last Word in Lusitania
Incident is Going Forward and
Will be Public Friday.

OPEN DEMAND FOR REDRESS

Position is That of a Dear Friend
Who Realizes His Friendship
Has Been Violated.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, May 13.—Germany must act, not quibble, nor promise.

Summed up in a sentence, that is the attitude of the United States in the negotiations growing out of the torpedoing of the Lusitania with its toll of American lives. America's last word is going forward to Germany this afternoon. The note was formally approved by the president at 10:15 a. m. today, signed an hour later by Secretary of State Bryan, and immediately turned over to confidential secretaries to be reduced to code.

"You can say that the note is now going forward," said Secretary Bryan at noon. "It will make between 1,200 and 1,500 words and will be made public Friday morning. It will be in Ambassador Gerard's hands not later than an early hour tomorrow and he will present it to the German foreign office without delay."

It was evident that the attitude of every high government official today was that they realized that America's affairs had reached a crisis. The die is cast in the president's latest note.

The note sets forth in language that can not be misinterpreted that the United States considered the killing of more than 100 Americans as a monstrous offense. It is characterized as an open act of hostility that admits no excuse. The United States expects all of these acts to be disavowed. It also expects that Germany will pledge itself to see that there is no repetition of them.

The position is that of a dear friend who realize that his friendship has been violated without warning. There is no note of apology. It is a frank and open demand for redress that the United States makes it plain it has a right to expect, as the result of the years of genuine friendship between two nations.

With his work on America's note to Germany finished, Pres. Wilson left the white house for a short automobile ride at 10:15 a. m. today. The note had been sent to the state department. Experts there were coding it as rapidly as possible for transmission to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin. There were reports that a portion had already started.

Selling a Propaganda

Over in England a recent newspaper campaign in the interest of a certain public policy has attracted widespread attention.

The author when questioned about it said:

I am not preaching. I am selling a code of morals.

"I am a business man and I choose the way of the business man—newspaper advertising."

The public discussion this idea has provoked is another evidence that the newspaper reader is a responsive individual.

place by the judges. Russell Williams, of Sheridan, who spoke on the subject, "Poverty and Crime" was in last position. He spoke second on the program.

The chairman of the meeting announced that the medals for the first, second and third prize winners in the track and field meet, the cup for the winning relay team, the banner for the team winning the track and field meet and the medal for the winner of the oratorical, had failed to arrive on time and that they would be sent to the respective schools just as soon as possible.

The adherents of the contesting orators entertained the audience with their yells and songs before the program opened and while the judges were returning their decision. Rushville far outnumbered the visitors in rooters and the guests of the local high school did not have opportunities to display their outlay of noise-making inventions. The whole Rushville crowd was loyal to the local representative and gave a prolonged greeting of applause when he got up to speak and when he finished.

The oratorical furnished the first opportunity of Rushville people to see the new auditorium. It was admired by several hundred who attended the contest. There were few vacant seats in the house. The auditorium is thoroughly modern. The stage is large and raised enough so that it is not hard to see from any part of the room. There is also a large balcony which will accommodate many people. The auditorium is fitted with opera chairs. The walls are finished in white and the indirect lighting system is used. The stage scenery was all in place for the oratorical last night. The beautiful curtain was the gift of the class of 1914.

A report was circulated yesterday evening that it had been found impossible to use the new auditorium and that the oratorical would take place in the Coliseum. This false rumor caused many persons to walk to the city park.

A Marked Difference

On one hand we have Theodore Roosevelt urging immediate and drastic action against Germany with respect to the Lusitania case and on the other Wm. H. Taft counseling patience and calmness in the present international crisis. Here we see the marked difference between two former presidents of the United States. No doubt Theodore Roosevelt believes what he advises, but he is entirely too impetuous and we believe that the majority of the people do not agree with his opinions.

While it is quiet true no one wants to see his country made the doormat for European powers, there are few who would like to see the United States rush ruthlessly into war when they consider the suffering that would result, not considering the financial loss that would be entailed.

There isn't any question but that the United States is respected abroad. The United States of America won its right to a high pinnacle in the eyes of the world when it, with an inefficient army—a mere handful of men—whipped the trained soldiers of the British. No one denies but that the United States is held in the same high esteem by most if not all foreign powers. The United States, in its marvelous growth and development, has been the wonder and admiration of the world, and who is there to say we shall follow the path of war-torn Europe and suffer the horrifying consequences.

We believe Former President Taft is right when says "There are worse things than war, but delay due to calm deliberation can not change the situation or minimize the effect of what we finally conclude to do." Continuing, he said in an address before the Union League at Philadelphia:

"With the present condition of war in Europe, our action, if it is to be extreme, will not lose efficacy by giving time to people, whose war it will be, to know what they are facing.

"Under our constitution the President conducts our foreign affairs until congress finds it necessary to declare war. Upon him is the acute responsibility in such a crisis. If he were to yield to the cry of extremists, and summon congress to take extreme measures, he would have great influence with congress under such a provocation. Indeed, the impulse to such action has usually been stronger with congress than with the executive.

"Now it may be that a series of acts of inhumanity and violations of the laws of war, to our national detriment and against our citizens, may force us on and lead our people to believe that whatever the cost no other courses is open to us.

"But we must bear in mind that if we have a war it is the people who must pay with lives and money the cost of it, and therefore they should not be hurried into the sacrifice until it is clear that they wish it, and know what they are doing when they wish it.

"A demand for war that can not survive the passion of the first days of public indignation and will not endure the test of delay and deliberation by all the people is not one that should be yielded to."

The President he said, was acting like Washington, Lincoln and McKinley in trying to avoid war. In the present situation it was imperative that he should know the opinion of the country without regard to prejudice.

"The task of the President is a heavy one," continued Mr. Taft. "He is acting for the whole country. He is anxious to find a way out of the present difficulty without war.

"Before party, before ourselves, we are for our country. That is what he is working for. Shall we not stand by him in it? He will not surrender our country's rights. It may be necessary that for a hundred lives and the method of their taking we should lose thousands and hundreds of thousands of lives. The national honor and interest may ultimately demand it, but time for serious thought and clearly weighing the consequences will not prejudice the justice of our cause or the opportunity to vindicate it."

If it is true that dead men tell no tales, some people will have a lonesome time after they shuffle off.

Shake out another reef of your patience. Spring will surely be here when it gets here.

Survey of Note Sent By United States to Germany

Washington, May 13.—The principal points in the United States note to Germany concerning the sinking of the Lusitania are substantially as follows:

1. The United States government calls attention to the various incidents in the war zone proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles; the sinking of the British liner Falaba, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; an attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing without warning of the American steamer Gulf Light, flying the stars and stripes, and finally the torpedoing without warning of the Lusitania with its loss of more than 1,000 lives of noncombatants, among them more than 100 Americans.
2. These acts are declared to be indefensible under international law. The United States points out that it never admitted Germany's right to do them, and warned the imperial government that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for attacks on American vessels or lives. A strict accounting, therefore, is now asked from Germany.
3. The unusual financial reparation will be sought, although Germany is in effect reminded that no reparation can restore the lives of those sacrificed in the sinking of the Lusitania and other ships.
4. Expressions of regret may comply with the legal precedents, but they are valueless unless accompanied by a cessation of the practices endangering lives of noncombatants.
5. The right of neutrals to travel any point of the high seas on neutral or belligerent merchantmen is asserted.
6. In the name of humanity and international law, the United States demands a guarantee that these rights will be respected, and that there be no repetition of these attacks on merchantmen carrying noncombatants.
7. The giving of warnings to the American public without officially communicating them to the United States government is commented on in connection with the German Embassy's printed advertisement before the sailing of the Lusitania, but irrespective of the failure to advise the American government of Germany's purpose the point is made that notice of an intention to do an unlawful act neither justified nor legalized it.
8. The suggestion is conveyed that the German government, of course, could not have intended to destroy innocent lives, and that consequently the German submarine commanders must have misunderstood their instructions. The American government indicates its hope that this will be true and a cessation of the unlawful practices thereby will result.
9. In conclusion, Germany's attention is called to the earnestness of the government people of the United States in this situation. It is made plain that the United States will leave nothing undone, either in diplomatic representation or other action, to obtain a compliance by Germany to the requests made.

It was believed the communication would reach the Berlin foreign office by tonight, European time.

The latest information was that it would not be made public until known to have been delivered. It's general purport had already been unofficially outlined, however, and officials admitted that these forecasts were substantially correct.

One point, however, was emphasized—unofficially:

"The note was so expressed as to call for a prompt and definite action accordingly—not for mere promises or by further discussion."

The air about the white house was one of finality. The government has acted. It was up to Germany to speak and act next.

The president received more than 200 telegrams today. They were without exception strongly commendatory of his course.

The definite statement was made that he had not abandoned his trip Friday to New York to review the fleet; he will go by water in the presidential yacht; he will be in constant wireless touch with the capital.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes

Built Layer on Layer—Extra Thick

Here is something every motorist should know.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are built of many thin layers—each of pure rubber—vulcanized together. No flaw can be hidden as in a thick piece of rubber. It is seen and eliminated. Every layer is perfect.

Such a Tube can't leak. And our valve patch can't leak, because it is part of the Tube and not stuck on.

Remember that. Many a tire trouble is due to leaky Tubes.

EIGHT RECORDS WERE SMASHED

Sheridan Strong in Track Events and Won Meet With 41 Points—Westfield Close Second.

SHELBYVILLE WAS THIRD
New Marks Made For All Field Events of Central Indiana High School League.

Eight Central Indiana High School league records were broken here yesterday at the second annual track and field meet, which was won by Sheridan. The score was as follows: Sheridan, 41; Westfield, 38; Shelbyville, 22; Richmond, 3; Rushville, 2.

It was a pretty race between Sheridan and Westfield. Superior work in the track events was the deciding point for Sheridan. Sheridan copped the one hundred yard dash, the 880 yard run, the 220 yard dash and the 440 yard dash. Westfield was best in the field events and a few more winners in the track events would have given them the meet.

The records that were broken were the 880 yard run, the 220 yard dash, the 120 yard hurdle, the mile run, the high jump, the discus hurl, the shot put and the broad jump.

The star of the meet was Richardson, of Sheridan. Richardson won the 100 yard dash, the 220 yard dash, and the discus hurl. He won second place in the shot put and second place in the broad jump. Linzy Armstrong, a colored athlete from Westfield was a close second to Richardson. Armstrong is the holder of several records established last year at the first meeting of the league in Shelbyville. Armstrong easily won both the high and low hurdle and the high jump. The colored boy was second in the discus hurl and third in the 100 yard dash and 220 yard dash.

In the very first event of the afternoon Armstrong, the Westfield athlete broke his own high jump record going over the bar at 5 feet 4 3/4 inches. His former record was 5 feet 3 inches. Dallis, of Richmond was second and Fred Keeling, of Shelbyville was third.

The 100 yard dash furnished a nice race between Richardson of Sheridan and Forrest Keeling of Shelbyville. Richardson won out by a distance of inches. The time was 11 seconds. The 880 yard run was a race between Nay of Sheridan, Todd of Westfield and Tonner of Shelbyville. They finished in the order named. The time was 2:11 setting a new mark. The old record was 2:14 1/2.

After winning the 100 yard dash Richardson came back and won the 220 yard dash. Then to add more honor to himself and his school he went right out and hurled the discus for a distance of 100 feet 4 inches. Rushville's first point came in the low hurdle when Kelso finished third. Armstrong won the event with Lynn of Westfield second.

Forrest Keeling of Shelbyville won the broad jump in an easy manner. In his first trial Keeling jumped 21 feet and 6 inches. He never equalled this mark in any of the other trials and the record stood.

The pole vault was won by Lynn of Westfield. He went over the bar at 9 feet 9 inches. Rapp of Shelbyville gave him a hard race for first honors. In an attempt to break the state record Lynn failed.

The relay race was won by Shelbyville with Westfield second. The relay race did not count points in the regular track and field meet. The summaries follow:

100-Yard Dash—Richardson (Sheridan), first; Forrest Keeling (Shelbyville) second; Armstrong (Westfield.) third. Time—11 seconds.

880-Yard Dash—Nay (Sheridan,) first Todd (Westfield.) second; Tonner (Shelbyville,) third Time—2:11

220-Yard Dash—Richardson (Sheridan), first; Forrest Keeling (Shelbyville,) second; Armstrong (Westfield.) third. Time—23 4/5.

120-Yard Hurdle—Armstrong (Westfield,) first; Lynn (Westfield,) second; Kelso (Rushville,) third. Time—:18.

220 Yard Hurdle—Armstrong (Westfield,) first; Rawlings (Sheridan), second; McKay (Shelbyville), third. Time—:28 4/5.

HAMILTON COMING TO BEAT RUSHERS

In Past Two Seasons Hoovens Lost Six Games and Two of These to Vordenburg.

GAME WILL START AT 2:30

In the Hamilton Hoovens, the attraction against the Rushers Sunday at Edgewater park, the fans will see one of the fastest teams in Ohio. In the past 48 games played by Hoovens they have lost only 6 games and one of the peculiar features about this record is that Earl Vordenburg, Rushville pitcher is credited with two out of six of these defeats.

Because Vordy has beaten the Hoovens twice they are coming here with the intentions of getting revenge and will try every way to win. Manager Page has the same team in line this year as in former years and in Franz and King he has two pitchers who have defeated such teams as the Shamrocks, All-Pros, Hello Boys, Blue Licks, Middletown, Greenville and other fast teams. The fans can expect one of the best games of the season from the Hoovens.

The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock and Jack England of this city will umpire.

school pupils and the help which he received from E. B. Marlatt his instructor. Without him, the contestant said, he could have accomplished very little.

Mr. Marlatt declared he valued highly the work of Harry Schmalzel as well as the other contestants in the preliminary. He said that he enjoyed training them because they all responded to his efforts. He urged that the interest in oratory be kept at a high pitch and the work go on. He closed with Edwin Vance Cook's poem, "How Did You Die."

R. W. Burns, coach of the track team, gave expression to his appreciation of the efforts put forth by the members of the team. He said it took several years to develop a good track team because track athletics require more time, endurance and natural ability. He declared he was well satisfied with the work of the team. Both Mr. Burns and Mr.

Marlatt were applauded by the high school pupils when they arose to speak

Miss Nelle Baldwin said that she wanted to speak for the girls of the high school. She said it was evident from the way the girls rooted for the team that if there had been a shortage of boys, it could have been filled by girls.

Frank Forry praised the persistence of the members of the track team and contestants in the oratorical and complimented them upon their work.

Miss Genevieve Brown told a story to illustrate that wind and no work accomplishes nothing and complimented the high school and its representatives. She said if some inland cities would suck as hard as they blew, they would be great seaports.

Principal Wilson closed the jollification meeting with a Tom Marshall story that left the high school in fine humor

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat and take a glass of Salts to flush out Kidneys—Drink plenty water.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

For every dollar you put into a Coldwell Lawn Mower you get full 100 cents value. Coldwell's are the lasting kind. Always ready to use. None of that waiting to have them sharpened. Coldwell's have been on the market since 1855. The largest lawn mower factory in the world is their home.

Coldwell materials and workmanship are what make the Coldwell product supreme.

You pay a trifle more for a Coldwell, but in the end they cost you less—you save money on repairs and for re-sharpening.

You can forget where the "repair shop" is if your lawn mower is a Coldwell.

Selling Is MORE than Trading Stock for Money!

Selling is part of the scheme of business. Most anyone can sell once, but selling so you can create permanent customers is selling successfully. That is why we carry the large stock of buggies we have on our sample floor for prospective customers or purchasers to make their selections from. They don't have to take something they don't want, as we carry every style of buggy that there is a demand for. Then after the customer has made his selection from our stock we tell him exactly what the buggy is and it has to be just as we represent it or we make it that way. The customer takes no chances. He is sure to get just what he pays for. ONE sale reduces itself to a confidence game unless the buyer is perfectly satisfied. Satisfaction sends a customer away with a smile that won't come off. That is why our buggy business has grown. We have found out how to hold customers after we get them and every satisfied customer is bound to bring a new customer sooner or later. Right now our stock of buggies is complete and if you are needing a buggy come in and make your selection. ## NEWMAN SAYS HE WILL PLEAD GUILTY

Rushville Boy Who Escaped From State Farm is Taken Back to Putnam County.

MUST GO TO STATE PRISON

Delbert "Buddy" Newman was taken to Greencastle yesterday afternoon by a deputy sheriff of Putnam county, where he will face a charge in the circuit court there of having escaped from the Indiana state farm. Newman stated that he would plead guilty and in this event will get a sentence of from two to five years in the state prison at Michigan City. The new state law does not provide for the sending of escaped prisoners to the reformatory at Jeffersonville and for this reason Newman will serve his sentence at Michigan City.

The deputy sheriff told Sheriff Cavitt that he took a boy under 21 years of age to Michigan City 13 week. In all five men have escaped from the penal farm Newman admitted he did wrong but stated that the thought of having to spend two years at the penal farm drove him to escape.

TRAVELING MEN GATHER TODAY

Annual State Convention of Indiana Division to T. P. A. Opens in Indianapolis.

5,000 Members Are Expected

(By United Press.)

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—Traveling men from all parts of the state and their wives and families are attending the annual state convention of the Indiana Division of the T. P. A. as guest of Post B... today. The convention and its festivities will continue Friday and Saturday. Friday afternoon a mammoth parade will be a feature. Many notable state officials and national officers of the T. P. A. will participate in the demonstration.

A special speedway race has been arranged for on this afternoon. Governor Ralston will be one of the convention speakers Friday morning. It is expected that more than five thousand travelers will attend the convention.

The new nine-foot-bed-sheet law was the subject of mutual congratulations among the travelers who claimed credit for it.

MOB DESTROYS GERMAN HOLDINGS

Tears Down and Burns Buildings and Then Burns German Flag at Johannesburg, S. A.

POLICE CAN'T STOP RIOTERS

(By United Press.)

Johannesburg, S. A., May 13.—In a mad wave of indignation over the sinking of the Lusitania, mobs today wrecked scores of buildings owned by Germans or German sympathizers and ran riot over the city. The police thus far have been unable to hold the rioters in check and the damage of nearly a million and a half dollars has been done.

Ten large warehouses, three hotels, seven saloons, three moving picture theaters and as many shops, the property of Germans, were either attacked or burned. Several hundred men forced their way into the German club and in less than five minutes the interior had been wrecked. The mob then formed in front of the town hall and burned a large German flag.

TANNIE E. SCOTT DIED LAST NIGHT

Expired at Home of Her Parents Northwest of Here After Illness of Four Months.

TO BE BURIED IN KENTUCKY

Miss Tannie E. Scott, 20 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Scott, died last night at eleven o'clock at the home of her parents, northwest of the city. Miss Scott had been ill for the past four months suffering from tuberculosis and her death had been expected. Miss Scott was a well known young woman and moved here several years ago from Kentucky with her parents.

Besides her parents she is survived by one sister, Miss Mary Scott. Short services will be held tonight at seven o'clock at the Scott residence and the remains will be taken to North Middletown, Ky., Friday morning for burial.

Elder S. J. West of Sheridan will preach at the Primitive Baptist church Saturday night, Sunday morning and at night.

Miss Theresa Sweetman met with a painful accident late yesterday afternoon, when she fell striking her head against a rail on the Big Four, railroad at Second street. Several stitches were taken in the forehead.

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ella, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telephatic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer, Macdougall. Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped to his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work, Lenora becomes one of Quest's assistants. The detective is called in to investigate the theft of the skeleton of an ape, of Lord Ashleigh. Macdougall escapes while on his way to prison. A string of diamonds is mysteriously stolen from Mrs. Rheinholdt during a reception.

THE POCKET WIRELESS.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mr. Sanford Quest sat in his favorite chair, his cigar inclined toward the left-hand corner of his mouth, his attention riveted upon a small instrument which he was supporting upon his knee. He glanced across the room to where Lenora was bending over her desk.

"We've done it this time, young woman," he declared triumphantly. "It's all O. K., working like a little peach."

Lenora rose and came toward him. "Is that the pocket wireless?"

He nodded.

"I've had Morrison out at Harlem all the morning to test it," he told her. "I've sent him at least half a dozen messages from this easy chair, and got the replies. How are you getting on with the code?"

"Not so badly for a stupid person," Lenora replied.

Laura, who had been busy with some papers at the farther end of the room, came over and joined them. "Say, it's a dandy little affair, that, Mr. Quest," she exclaimed. "I had a try with it, a day or so ago. Jim spoke to me from Fifth avenue."

"We've got it tuned to a shade now," Quest declared. "Equipped with this simple little device, you can speak to me from anywhere up to ten or a dozen miles."

Quest rose to his feet and moved restlessly about the room.

"Say, girls," he confessed, "this is the first time in my life I have been in a fix like this. Two cases on hand and nothing doing with either of them. Criminologist, indeed! Whose box is this?"

Quest had paused suddenly in front of an oak sideboard which stood against the wall. Occupying a position upon it of some prominence was a small black box, whose presence there seemed to him unfamiliar. Laura came over to his side and looked at it also in puzzled fashion.

"Never saw it before in my life," she answered.

Quest grunted.

"H'm! No one else has been in the room, and it hasn't been empty for more than ten minutes," he remarked. "Well, let's see what's inside, anyway."

He lifted off the lid. There was nothing in the interior but a sheet of paper folded up. Quest smoothed it out with his hand. They all leaned over and read the following words, written in an obviously disguised hand:

You have embarked on a new study—anthropology. What characteristics strikes you most forcibly in connection with it? Cunning? The necklace might be where the skeleton is. Why not begin at the beginning?

The note was unsigned, but in the spot where a signature might have been there was a rough pen drawing of two hands, with fingers extended, talon fashion, menacingly, as though poised to strike at some unseen enemy. Quest, after their first moment of stupefaction, whistled softly.

"The hands!" he muttered.

"What hands?" Lenora asked.

"The hands that gripped Mrs. Rheinholdt by the throat," he reminded them. "Don't you remember? Hands without arms?"

There was another brief, almost stupefied silence. Then Laura broke into speech.

"What I want to know is," she demanded, "who brought the thing here?"

"A most daring exploit, anyway," Quest declared. "If we could answer your question, Laura, we could solve the whole riddle. We are up against something, and no mistake."

"The hand which placed that box there," Quest continued slowly, "is capable of even more wonderful things. We must be cautious. Hello!"

The door had opened. The professor stood upon the threshold.

"I trust that I have done right in coming up?" he inquired.

"Quite right, professor," Quest assured him. "They know well enough downstairs that I am always at home to you. Come in."

"I am so anxious to learn," the professor continued eagerly, "whether there is any news—of my skeleton."

"Not yet, professor, I am sorry to say," Quest replied. "Come in and shut the door."

"There is a young lady here," he said, "who caught me up upon the landing. She, too, I believe, wishes to see you."

He threw open the door and stood on one side. A young woman came a little hesitatingly into the room. Her hair was plainly brushed back, and she wore the severe dress of the Salvation Army.

"Want to see me, young lady?" Quest asked.

She held out a book.

"My name is Miss Quigg," she said.

"I want to ask you for a subscription to our funds,"

Quest frowned a little.

"Very well, Miss Quigg, you shall have a donation. I am busy today, but call at the same hour tomorrow and my secretary shall have a check ready for you."

The girl smiled her gratitude.

The professor laid his hand upon her arm as she passed.

"Young lady," he observed, "you seem very much in earnest about your work."

"It is only the people in earnest, sir," she answered, "who can do any good in the world. My work is worth being in earnest about."

"You compel my admiration. My most respectful admiration. May I, too, be permitted?"

He drew out a pocketbook and passed over toward her a little wad of notes.

"It is so kind of you," she murmured. "We never have any hesitation in accepting money. May I know your name?"

"It is not necessary," the professor answered. "You can enter me," he added, as he held open the door for her, "as a friend—or would you prefer a pseudonym?"

"A pseudonym, if you please," she begged. "We have so many who send us sums of money as friends. Anything will do."

The professor glanced around the room.

"What pseudonym shall I adopt?" he ruminated. "Shall I say that an oak sideboard gives you five hundred dollars? Or a Chippendale sofa? Or," he added, his eyes resting for a moment upon the little box, "a black box?"

The two girls from the other side of the table started. Even Quest swung suddenly around. The professor, as though pleased with his fancy, nodded as his fingers played with the lid.

"Yes, that will do very nicely," he decided. "Put me down—'Black Box,' five hundred dollars."

The girl took out her book and began to write. The professor, with a little farewell bow, crossed the room toward Quest. Lenora moved toward the door.

"Let me see you out," she said to the girl pleasantly.

Lenora opened the door. Both girls started. Only a few feet away Craig was standing, his head a little thrust forward. For a moment the quiet respect of his manner seemed to have deserted him. He seemed at a loss for words.

"What do you want?" Lenora demanded.

"I was waiting for my master," Craig explained.

"Why not downstairs?" Lenora asked suspiciously. "You did not come up with him."

"I am driving the professor in his automobile," Craig explained. "It occurred to me that if he were going to be long here I should have time to go and order another tire. It is of no consequence, though. I will go down and wait in the car."

Lenora stood at the top of the stairs and watched him disappear. Then she went thoughtfully back to her work. The professor and Quest were talking at the farther end of the room.

"I was in hopes, in great hopes," the professor admitted, "that you might have heard something. I promised to call at Mrs. Rheinholdt's this afternoon."

Quest shook his head.

"There is nothing to report at present, Mr. Ashleigh," he announced.

"Dear me," the professor murmured, "this is very disappointing. Is there no clue, Mr. Quest—no clue at all?"

"Not a ghost of one," Quest acknowledged. "I am as far off solving the mystery of the disappearance of your skeleton and Mrs. Rheinholdt's necklace as I have ever been."

The professor took a courteous leave of them all and departed. Lenora crossed the room to where Quest was seated.

"Mr. Quest," she asked, "do you believe in inspiration?"

"I attribute a large amount of my success," Quest replied, "to my profound belief in it."

"Then let me tell you," Lenora continued, "that I have one, and a very strong one. Do you know that when I went to the door a few minutes ago the professor's servant, Craig, was there, listening?"

"Inspector French has had his men watching Craig ever since the night of the robbery," quietly remarked Quest. "What's that? Answer the telephone, Lenora."

Lenora obeyed.

"It's Inspector French," she announced. "He wants to speak to you."

Quest nodded and held out his hand for the receiver.

"Hello, French!" he exclaimed.

"Anything fresh?"

"Nothing much," was the answer.

"One of my men, though, who has been up Mayton avenue way, brought in something I found rather interesting this morning. I want you to come round and see it."

"Go right ahead and tell me about it," Quest invited.

"You know we've been shadowing Craig," the inspector continued. "Not much luck up till now. Fellow seems never to leave his master's side. We have had a couple of men up there, though, and one of them brought in a curious-looking object he picked up just outside the back of the professor's grounds."

"What is the thing?" Quest asked.

"Well, I want you to see whether you agree with me," French went on. "If you can't come round, I'll come to you."

"No necessity," Quest replied.

"We've got over little difficulties of that sort. Laura, just tack on the phototelesme," he added, holding the receiver away for a moment. "One moment, French. There that's right," he added, as Laura, with deft fingers arranged what seemed to be a sensitized mirror to the instrument. "Now, French, hold up the article just in front of the receiver. There, that's right. Hold it steady. I've got the focus of it now. Say, French, where did you say that was found?"

"Just outside the professor's back gate," French grunted. "But you're not kidding me—"

"It's a finger from the professor's skeleton you've got there," Quest interrupted.

Quest hung up the receiver. Then he turned toward his two assistants.

"Another finger from the professor's skeleton," he announced, "has been found just outside his grounds. What do you suppose that means?"

"Craig," Lenora declared confidently.

"Craig on your life," Laura echoed.

"Say, Mr. Quest, I've got an idea," Quest nodded.

"Go right ahead with it."

"Didn't the butler at Mrs. Rheinholdt's say that Craig belonged to a servant's club up town? I know the place well. Let me go and see if I can't join and pick up a little information about the man. He must have a night out sometimes. Let's find out what he does? How's that?"

"Capital!" Quest agreed. "Get along, Laura. And you, Lenora," he added, "put on your hat. We'll take a ride towards Mayton avenue."

CHAPTER IX.

The exact spot where the bones of the missing skeleton was discovered, was easily located. It was about twenty yards from a gate which led into the back part of the professor's grounds. Quest wasted very little time before arriving at a decision.

"The discovery of the bones so near the professor's home," he decided, "cannot be coincidence only. We will waste no time out here, Lenora. We will search the grounds. Come on."

It was hard to know which way to turn. Every path was choked with tangled weeds and bushes. They wandered about almost aimlessly for nearly half an hour. Then Quest came to a sudden standstill. Lenora gripped his arm. They had both heard the same sound—a queer, crooning cry, half plaintive, half angry.

"What's that?" he exclaimed.

Lenora still clung to his arm.

"I hate this place," she whispered. "It terrifies me. What are we looking for, Mr. Quest?"

"Can't say that I know exactly," the latter answered, "but I guess we'll find out where that cry came from. Sounded to me uncommonly like a human effort."

They had made their way up as

In Front of Them Crouched an Unrecognizable Creature.

dered about almost aimlessly for nearly half an hour. Then Quest came to a sudden standstill. Lenora gripped his arm. They had both heard the same sound—a queer, crooning cry, half plaintive, half angry.

"What's that?" he exclaimed.

Lenora still clung to his arm.

"I hate this place," she whispered. "It terrifies me. What are we looking for, Mr. Quest?"

"Can't say that I know exactly," the latter answered, "but I guess we'll find out where that cry came from. Sounded to me uncommonly like a human effort."

They had made their way up as

"The Hut, Professor! The Hut is on Fire!"

far as the hedge, which they skirted for a few yards until they found an opening. Then Quest gave vent to a little exclamation. Immediately in front of them was a small hut, built apparently of sticks and bamboos, with a stronger framework behind. The sloping roof was grass-grown and entwined with rushes. The only apology for a window was a queer little hole set quite close to the roof.

There was a rude-looking door, but Quest, on trying it, found it locked.

They walked around the place, but found no other opening. All the time from inside they could hear queer scuffling sounds. Lenora's cheeks grew paler.

"Must we stay?" she murmured. "I don't think I want to see what's inside. Mr. Quest! Mr. Quest!"

She clung to his arm. They were opposite the little aperture which served as a window, and at that moment it suddenly framed the face of a creature, human in features, diabolical in expression.

"Say, that's some face!" he remarked. "I'd hate to spoil it."

Even as he spoke it disappeared.

"We've got to get inside there, Lenora," he announced, stepping forward.

She followed him silently. A few turns of the wrist and the door yielded. Keeping Lenora a little behind him, Quest gazed around eagerly. Exactly in front of him, clad only in a loin cloth, with hunched-up shoulders, a necklace around its neck, with blazing eyes and ugly, gleaming teeth, crouched some unrecognizable creature, human, yet inhuman, a monkey, and yet a man. There were a couple of monkeys swinging by their tails from a bar, and a leopard chained to a staple in the ground, walking round and round in the far corner, snapping and snarling every time he glanced towards the newcomers. The creature in front of him stretched out a hairy hand towards a club, and gripped it. Quest drew a long breath. His eyes were set hard.

"Drop that club," he ordered.

The creature suddenly sprang up. The club was waved around his head.

"Drop it," Quest repeated firmly. "You will sit down in your corner. You will sleep."

The club slipped from the hairy fingers. The tense frame, which had been already crouched for the spring, was suddenly relaxed. The knees trembled.

"Back to that corner," Quest ordered, pointing.

Slowly and dejectedly, the ape-man crept to where he had been ordered and sat there with dull, non-comprehending stare. It was a new force, this, a note of which he had felt—the Superman raising the voice of authority. Quest touched his forehead and found it damp. The strain of those few seconds had been intolerable.

"I don't think these other animals will hurt," he said. "Let's have a look around the place."

The search took only a few moments. The monkeys ran and jumped around them, gibbering as though with pleasure. The leopard watched them always with a snarl and an evil light in his eye.

They found nothing unusual until they came to the distant corner, where a huge piano box lay on its side with the opening turned to the wall.

"This is where the brute sleeps, I suppose," Quest remarked. "We'll turn it around, anyway."

They dragged it a few feet away from the wall, so that the opening faced them. Then Lenora gave a little cry and Quest stood suddenly still.

"The skeleton!" Lenora shrieked. "It's the skeleton!"

It was a skeleton so old that the bones had turned a dull gray. Quest glanced towards the hands.

"Little fingers both missing," he muttered.

"Remember the message!" she exclaimed. Where the skeleton is, the necklace may be also."

Quest nodded shortly.

"We'll search."

They turned over everything in the place fruitlessly. There was no sign of the necklace.

"You get outside, Lenora," Quest directed. "I'll just bring this beast round again and then we'll tackle the professor."

Quest turned towards the creature, which crouched still huddled up in its corner.

"Look at me," he ordered.

The creature obeyed. Once more its frame seemed to grow more virile and natural.

"You need sleep no longer," Quest said. "Wake up and be yourself."

The effect of these words was instantaneous. Almost as he spoke, the creature crouched for a spring. There was wild hatred in its close-set eyes, the snarl of something fiendlike in its contorted mouth. Quest slipped quickly through the door.

"Anyone may have that for a pet!" he remarked grimly. "Come, Lenora, there's a word or two to be said to the professor. There's something here will need a little explanation."

He lit a cigar as they struggled back along the path. Presently they reached the untidy-looking avenue, and a few minutes later arrived at the house.

Quest searched in vain for a bell. They walked round the piazza. There were no signs of any human life. They came back to the front door. Quest tried the handle and found it open. They passed into the hall.

"Hostipable sort of place, anyway," he remarked. "We'll go in and wait, Lenora."

They found their way to the study, which seemed to be the only habitable room. Lenora glanced around at its strange contents with an expression almost of awe.

A small motor car passed the window, driven by Craig. The professor descended. A moment or two later he entered the room. He gazed from Quest to Lenora at first in blank surprise. Then he held out his hands.

"You have good news for me, my friends!" he exclaimed. "I am sure of it. How unfortunate that I was not at home to receive you! Tell me—don't keep me in suspense, if you please— you have discovered my skeleton?"

"We have found the skeleton," Quest announced.

For a single moment the newcomer stood as though turned to stone.

"My skeleton!" he murmured. "Mr. Quest, I knew it. You are the greatest man alive. Now tell me quickly—I want to know everything, but this first of all. Where did you find the skeleton? Who was the thief?"

"We found the skeleton, professor," Quest replied, "within a hundred yards of this house."

The professor's mouth was wide open. He looked like a bewildered child. It was several seconds before he spoke.

"Within a hundred yards of this house? Then it wasn't stolen by one of my rivals?"

"I should say not," Quest admitted. "Where? exactly did you find it?" the professor insisted.

"I found it in a hut," Quest said, "hidden in a piano box. I found there, also, a creature—a human being, I must call him—in a state of captivity."

"Hidden in a piano box?" the professor repeated wonderingly. "Why, you mean in Hartoo's sleeping box, then?"

"If Mr. Hartoo is the gentleman who tried to club me, you are right," Quest admitted. "Mr. Ashleigh, before we go any further I must ask you for an explanation as to the presence of that person in your grounds?"

The professor hesitated for a moment. Then he slowly crossed the room, opened the drawer of a small escritoire, and drew out a letter.

"You have heard of Sir William Ramsmore, the president of the Royal society?" he asked.

Quest nodded.

"This letter is from him," the professor continued. "You had better read it."

The criminologist read it aloud. Lenora looked over his shoulder:

To Prof. Edgar Ashleigh, New York.

My Dear Professor: Your communication gratifies and amazes me. I can say no more. It fell to your lot to discover the skeleton of the anthropoid, a marvelous thing, in its way, and needing only its corollary to form the greatest discovery since the dark ages. Now you tell me that in the person of Hartoo, the last of the Inyamo race of South America, you have found that corollary. You have supplied the missing link. You are in a position to give to the world a definite and logical explanation of the evolution of man. Let me give you one word of warning, professor, before I write you at greater length on the matter. Anthropologists are afflicted more, even than any other race of scientific men, with jealousy. Guard your secret well, lest the honor of this discovery should be stolen from you.

WILLIAM RAMSMORE.

The professor nodded deliberately as Quest finished the letter.

"Now, perhaps you can understand," he said, "why it was necessary to keep Hartoo absolutely hidden. In a month's time my papers will be ready. Then I shall electrify the world. I shall write not a new page but a new volume across the history of science. I shall—"

The door was suddenly thrown open.

Craig sprang in, no longer the self-contained, perfect man-servant, but with the face of some wild creature. His shout was one almost of agony.

"The hut, professor! The hut is on fire!" he cried.

His appearance on the threshold was like a flash. They heard his flying feet down the hall, and without a moment's hesitation they all followed. The professor led the way down a narrow and concealed path, but when they reached the little clearing in which the hut was situated, they were unable to approach any nearer. The place was a whirlwind of flame. The smell of kerosene was almost overpowering. The wild yell of the leopard rose above the strange, half-human gibbering of the monkeys and the hoarse, bass calling of another voice, at the sound of which Lenora and even Quest shuddered. Then, as they came, breathless, to a standstill, they saw a strange thing. One side of the hut fell in, and almost immediately the leopard with a mighty spring, leaped from the place and ran howling into the undergrowth. The monkeys followed but they came straight for the professor, wringing their hands. They fawned at his feet as though trying to show him their scorched bodies. Then for a single moment they saw the form of the ape-man as he struggled to follow the others. His strength failed him, however. He fell backwards into the burning chasm.

The professor bade them farewell, an hour later, on the steps of the house. He seemed suddenly to have aged.

"You have done your best, Mr. Quest," he said, "but fate has been too strong. Remember this, though. It is quite true that the cunning of Hartoo may have made it possible for him to have stolen the skeleton and to have brought it back to his hiding-place, but it was jealousy—cruel, brutal, foul jealousy which smeared the walls of that hut with kerosene and set light to it. The work of a lifetime, my dreams of scientific immortality, have vanished in those flames."

He turned slowly away from them and re-entered the house. Quest and Lenora made their way down the avenue and entered the automobile which was waiting for them, almost in silence. The latter glanced toward his companion, as they drove off.

"Say, this has been a bit tough for you," he remarked. "I'll have to call somewhere and get you a glass of wine."

She tried to smile but her strength was almost gone. They drove to a restaurant and sat there for some little time. Lenora soon recovered her color. She even had courage to speak of the events of the afternoon when they re-entered the automobile.

"Mr. Quest," Lenora murmured, "who

THE FIRST THING
A GOOD DOCTOR
PRESCRIBES

A good physic and liver stimulant is usually the first remedy prescribed by the physician when called to a case. He does so because he knows that most of our ills are directly or indirectly due to constipation, sluggish liver, etc.; therefore his first concern is to reach and remove the probable cause of the illness, and the system, relieved of this poisonous feces, again becomes normal.

And that is exactly the idea behind Santanel Laxative Tablets, a remedy for constipation, indigestion, and liver troubles, every ingredient of which has been passed on and approved by an eminent chemist, which you or any of your family may take and which easily and painlessly, but thoroughly and effectively, will cleanse your system, stimulate your liver, thereby ridding your organs and your blood of many of the underlying causes of illness and trouble.

Santanel Laxatives contain no calomel. They are mild yet very effective. Do not gripe nor irritate.

We know Santanel Laxatives will satisfy you. So positive are we of this that we sell Santanels under a broad money-back guarantee, viz.: If in your judgment they don't give you the results you expect, send us the empty box; we will refund your money.

Santanels are on sale at your druggist's. Ten doses, 10c. Send for a box, take one tonight and make tomorrow bright. A physician's trial package free, if you mention this advertisement when you write. Santanel Remedies Co., 505 Union Central Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Suggestions as to Means by Which
Country Church May Hold Young
People Are Heard

LAST SESSION OF CONFERENCE

Generally Agreed by Speakers That
Rural Church Holds The Key
To The Situation.

LaFayette, Ind., May 13.—Many ways of increasing the efficiency of the country church and thereby strengthening the farm's hold on young people who are so rapidly slipping away to the cities were suggested at the final session of the Rural Ministers' Conference at Purdue University today. It was generally agreed by speakers and listeners that the rural church holds the key to the rural situation and that the problem of making country life as attractive and enjoyable as life in the city or town must be solved by the cooperation of church, school and home. Many excellent ideas were put forth today and the pastors went back to their homes inspired to become community leaders, something more than preachers, actual ministers in every sense of the word.

The importance of boys and girls' clubs in rural communities was emphasized by Z. M. Smith who has charge of this important branch of the Agricultural Extension Department's activities. He urged the ministers to lend a helping hand to this movement. It aims to develop boys and girls into men and women of fine character and therefore its object is directly in line with what the church seeks to accomplish. Character development, he said, is made easy by the processes involved in club work. The principle of the square deal, honest competition, overcoming obstacles, the moral value of productive employment, the intellectual stimulus from learning to do a worthwhile piece of work are some of the elemental qualities of character that are thus developed. He said the minister must get in touch with the problem of the young people and must cooperate with the schools in organizing these boys' and girls' clubs.

Mrs. Charles Sewell of Otterbein discussed "The Church and the Social Needs of Farm Folk." "The country church should be the social center of the rural community" she said. "Our churches fail to accomplish their real purpose when they are opened infrequently and generally kept closed to the people. The church ought to be the common meeting place. The country needs good, efficient churches with all the departments of city churches. It needs churches that will attract the young people. We also need thoroughly equipped pastors with a love of country life in their hearts. We must have the farm folk working harmoniously together. And, lastly, we must have the 'peace that passeth understanding.' Then, and not until then, will the rural church and the farm folk come into their own."

Too much denominationalism is hindering the rural church according to the Rev. O. F. Hall, student pastor at Purdue. The Rev. Hall has had considerable rural experience and has made a study of conditions there. In address on "The Use and Abuse of Denominationalism" today he said: "With few exceptions our religious denominations had their birth in intellectual or temperamental differences, but they now subsist for the most part on sentiment and selfishness. For we have outgrown the causes that brought them into existence. There are in this country 186 recognized denominations and more than 1,000 individualistic and independent churches which disclaim connection with any of the regular divisions. The sheer needlessness of this is made clear by the fact that there are 17 Methodist bodies, 16 Baptist, 12 Presbyterian and 12 Mennonite. Without a single change in doctrine or policy these could be cut down to 11 and with a few slight changes to four. The shame of the present condition is that so small number of churches are spending more time and effort trying to hold any and every corn or callus without fail, without fussing with thick bandages, toe harnesses, cornsweeling salves, irritating ointments. It's applied in 2 seconds—bing, bing—2 drops, the work is done, the corn shrivels up, your corn agony ends and the corn leaves forever! All the limping, the pains that dart to your heart's core, the crucifixion of having to wear shoes over screaming corns, the danger of blood poison from making them bleed by using knives, razors and scissors—are gone at last! "GETS-IT" is the new way, the sure, simple, painless way. Try it for corns, calluses, warts and bunions. "GETS-IT" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. their own than in overcoming sin and selfishness. The ordinary village would be better served by one church. The overthrow of denominationalism is irresistible."

A discussion of the building and equipment best adapted to modern needs was contributed by the Rev. J. N. McDonald of Savanna, Ill., with the Rev. W. D. Samuels of Bluffton and the Rev. J. J. Wilson of Star City taking part in the discussion. Rev. McDonald said the first need of the country was a playground which he declared was far more important than a burial ground. He urged the building of smaller churches, that is with less auditorium space and more space devoted to institutional work. He said the church of the modern times must be a community workshop.

Dean John H. Skinner of the School of Agriculture of Purdue University spoke on "Education for Leadership in Rural Communities." Prof. Skinner urged a practical understanding of farm and rural life problems combined with a scientific education touching these points. He defined the ideal rural leader and outlined the qualities that made for success in this field.

"The Importance of the Rural Field" was the subject of an address by the Rev. Albert Boynton Storms of the Central Avenue Methodist church, Indianapolis. Dr. Storms is intensely interested in the problem of the rural church and the people depending upon these churches for spiritual and social uplift. He asserted that the increase in farm population has been very small in the last few decades and the country population has changed. The owner of farms is moving to the city while the tenant is taking his place. In the Miami valley in Ohio recent surveys showed from 40 to 50 per cent of the farms operated by tenants.

"The church and school flourish best on good soil," said Dr. Storms. Intensive agriculture seems to result in intensive intelligence and spirituality. While Boone county decreased in population in the decade 1900-1910 6.3 per cent where intensive and scientific agriculture has been highly developed and where land has more than doubled in value in the decade the increase in church membership has increased 10.3 per cent. In the meantime there has been an enormous increase in farm and crop values. Statistics impress us with the economic importance of the country. More capital and enterprise are sure to be enlisted in agricultural pursuits. With the turn of the tide toward the country there will be increasing importance attaching to those institutions which foster the intellectual and spiritual life. The school and church are destined again to come to their former place as social centers of influence and power. The establishment of strong churches as community centers, with settled pastors of skill and with country life enthusiasm, and with breadth of Christian sympathy rather than sectarian zeal, is the need of the hour. The interests of the people must be the interests of the church that would serve the people."

JITNEY CRAZE IS SPREADING

Unless Regulation is Made The Time
Is Approaching When Traction
Companies Will be Hurt

GARY COMPANY ALREADY HIT

Indianapolis Traction Official Says

They Cannot Survive—Better
Service May Result

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—Unless Indiana has a different experience from that of a score of states, the time is rapidly approaching when the larger cities will be asked to regulate the jitney bus. Although Indiana has been slower than most states to accept the nickel-a-ride auto, the zone of infection is rapidly growing, and it is believed that as summer approaches nearly every city of any size will have its jitney bus.

Already the list of cities possessing the jitney is imposing. Among them are Terre Haute, Jeffersonville, New Albany, Evansville, Peru, Muncie, Gary, Indianapolis, Brazil, Connersville and Rushville. The list is growing so fast it cannot be kept up to date.

The Gary & Interurban Company is the first to indicate that it has been hard hit by the jitney bus. It has requested the Gary city council to grant a conference on a matter vital to the continued operation of their road during the month of June. The road will request that the council pass an ordinance providing a license of several hundred dollars a year for the jitney buses, said a councilman.

The Gary company declares that unless the jitneys are handicapped it will have to discontinue certain service. Gary's jitney bus experience is less than a month in duration. Some of these jitneys have earned $12 a day, it is said.

But various cities profess to see in the jitney bus a real menace. Oakland, Cal., a city of 150,140 population, was the setting for a thorough investigation by a committee from Chamber of Commerce. It drew one conclusion that it considered axiomatic. It declared that a jitney bus cannot operate on a paying basis over a longer route than three miles. The conclusion was that property outside this three mile zone would suffer a tremendous loss if the jitney bus should drive the street cars out of service. The street cars could not operate on a paying basis without the short-haul fares, and thereafter the citizens in the outlying districts would be without transportation.

Under these conditions, it is claimed, the regular street car service, no matter how inadequate it has appeared in the past, would be sorely missed.

One jitney driver in this city reports that he averages $7 to $8 a day. This is in striking contrast to the report from St. Louis that on April 19 all jitney buses increased their fares from a jitney to 10 cents.

An official high up in the Indianapolis Traction Company was asked his opinion today. He said the jitney could not survive. He teemed with statistics to the effect that the jitney "craze" was losing ground. He was reading a report on the jitney "craze" when the United Press Correspondent walked in. On all sides lay these reports. He had letters from all parts of the country containing jitney statistics.

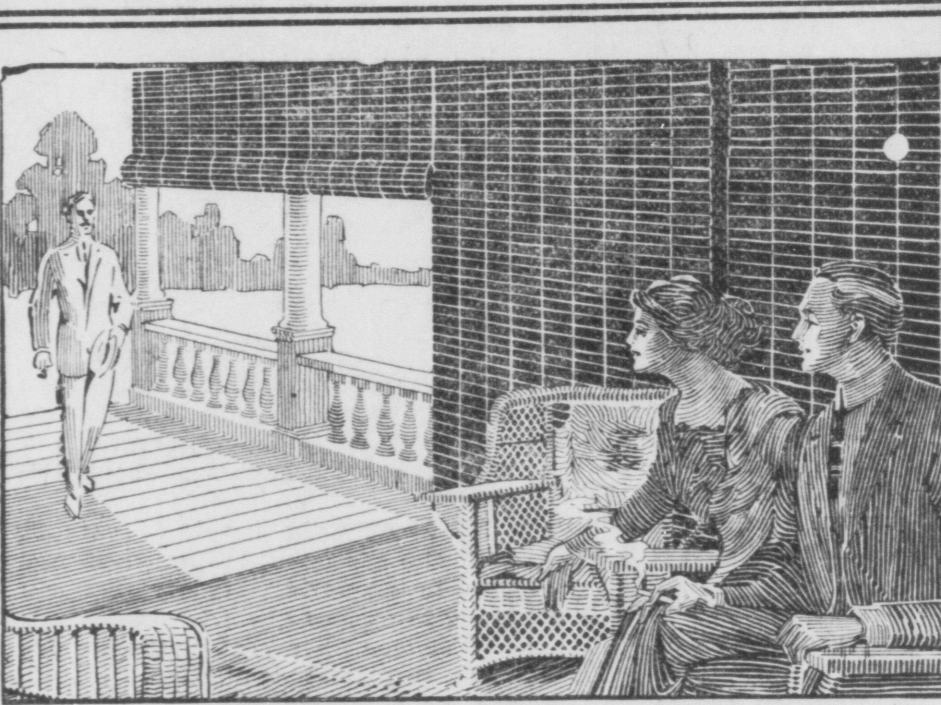

One thing is certain—the jitney bus infection is being studied by traction magnates. Systematically and thoroughly they are tabulating the reports to determine whether the jitney will menace them long.

This official said the jitney never would affect Indianapolis where street car tickets may be bought for 4 cents. He said, however, that some traction companies might be forced into the hands of the receivers by what he termed "the craze."

He produced statistics to show that in Tennessee, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maryland, Washington, Rhode Island and Iowa the legislatures have sent to the governors bills that declare the jitney bus a public utility and placed them under the public service commission. Some of the governors have signed the bills.

GOOD WORK DONE BY RED CROSS TELLS FARMERS TO KEEP STOCK

American Society Has Transmitted $379,380 in Cash to Europe and Large Amount of Supplies.

ONLY ONE APPEAL FOR MONEY

Works Better Than the Volunteer Organizations as They Know the Fields and Needs.

By Burton K. Standish.
(Written for United Press.)

Washington, May 13.—Mabel T. Boardman, just now active director of the "infinitely small" work of the American Red Cross, is firmly convinced that persons wishing to aid victims of the war, combatant or non combatant, make a mistake when they fail to make use of the Red Cross.

"A number of volunteer organizations have sprung up," she said, and their purpose is fine. They want to help and they set about in their own way to do it. The trouble is that their work often duplicates our own and that means just that much waste; it means that money is being spent twice for one end, whereas there are so many things crying for relief which we haven't the money to relieve. I think this is in large part due to the failure to understand that the Red Cross will apply funds to any purpose for which it is given. If $5000 is given for a specific piece of relief work it is used for that and the same is true if the sum given is $5. However, if we had planned to spend the same amount of funds already in hand for that work we don't do it, we divert it to another crying need.

"For example, we have transmitted $379,380 in cash to Europe. Of this $197,700 was for purposes designated by the givens, as against $181,680 not designated.

"The Red Cross knows the field better, we believe, than new volunteer organizations can possibly know it; we've got our machinery in operation and are able to make the expense the very minimum. Volunteer organizations, from the very nature of things, incur expenses that are already being borne by the Red Cross and which should not be twice taken from the too meager funds available for relief work.

"I wish people understood this better. I wish they realized that when Congress created the Red Cross acting under the Treaty of Geneva in the creating of a volunteer aid society, it intended that the Red Cross should be the American people's expression of sympathy and the American people's means of helping the stricken whenever need arises. Nothing could be more essentially an institution of the American people and of the American government that is the Red Cross. Probably most people do not know that our accounts, after being audited by the War Department, are reported to Congress, together with detailed statement of our work.

There is evidently something in what Miss Boardman says. The Rockefeller Foundation seems to think so. Such money as it has set aside for war relief work has been turned directly over to the Red Cross to be administered as the Red Cross sees fit. The Foundation, admittedly expert in such matters itself, concedes this field to the Red Cross and to avoid waste and misuse gives the latter the funds, asking only for a receipt for it and no explanation of how used.

But one appeal for financial help has been made, that by President Wilson, as president of the Red Cross, August 13. The response to that thus far has been $1,415,032. More is urgently needed.

Some of the uses to which the money has been put are here indicated:

Cotton, 937,000 pounds; gauze, 832,000 yards; Crenoline, 65,000 yards; bandages, 924,600 pieces; adhesive plaster, 32,500 yards; chloroform and ether 23,100 pounds; medicine, 4,870 pounds; compressed tablets, 680,000; hypodermic tablets, 98,000; disinfectants, assorted, 26,936 pounds; bichloride tablets, 48,000; tincture of iodine, 780 quarts; plaster of paris 18,000

Agricultural Expert Says High Price of corn is no Reason For Getting Rid of Livestock.

GET REPAID IN LONG RUN

Failure of Gas Tractors Are Due Largely to Inefficient Operations, According to Figures

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, May 13.—J. A. Drake, an Agriculture Department correspondent, discussing the problem perplexing many Northern states farmers at this time advises them to hold on to their livestock rather than to sell, despite the high price of corn and the low price of livestock. Conditions have been made worse than usual, he says, by rapid marketing and the inferior quality of stock.

"The conservative farmer who has avoided overstocking while prices were high," says Drake, "generally keeps a good share of his stock when such conditions arise and foregoes the temptation to sell his corn at the high cash price which it will bring. In a short time afterward he usually finds that the price of livestock has come back to normal and he is repaid thus for retaining his stock animals even on high-priced corn."

He believes it is safe to predict that this relative difference will be wiped out gradually.

The case of a family on a 320 acre farm in North Dakota has been cited to the Agriculture Department by W. C. Funk as illustrating the part a woman plays in the successful operation of many farms.

The family averaged seven adults during the year. Four were hired men, the other three being the farmer, his wife and the grown daughter. The latter two did all the house work, caring for an 8-room house, and the laundry work. They canned 300 quarts of fruit and 100 quarts of vegetables and did most of the work in the vegetable garden. Practically all the vegetables consumed were grown in this garden, so, among the important products they prepared for consumption were: 50 bushels of potatoes, 3 bushels of green beans, 4 bushels of green peas, 3 bushels of onions, 400 head of cabbage, 10 bushels of turnips, 6 bushels of beets, 3 bushels of cucumbers, 6 bushels of tomatoes, 36 head of cauliflower, 7 bushels of sweet corn, 1900 pounds of flour, 144 pounds of coffee, 1800 pounds of dressed pork, 200 head of poultry, 520 dozens of eggs and 312 pounds of butter.

Farmers buying gas tractors are advised that 21.9 per cent of all failures are due to inefficient operations, while many cases of inability to get all possible value out of such machines is due to inexperienced handling. It is more important, it is pointed out, that the operator of a heavy tractor or know his machines thoroughly than it is for the driver of a pleasure machine. The latter is equipped with a motor with an immense amount of reserve power and need not therefore be maintained at high efficiency to give satisfactory service, while delay for repairs mean chiefly inconvenience, not loss of money as in the case of the farm tractor. It is suggested that farmers owning tractors will be repaid by taking a course of pounds; surgical instruments, 1573; operating accessories 2998; hospital equipment, 50 cases; field hospital outfits, 423 cases; field medical outfits, 20; ligatures 98,000; antitoxin for typhoid, 20,000 doses; tetanus antitoxin 55,000 doses; smallpox vaccine 10,000 tubes; blankets, 10,280; stretchers 9240; coats, 516; women's and girls' sweaters, 1740; for workers in Serbia, 50 cases; motor ambulances, 19.

These are the supplies purchased. In addition donations aggregate 7,668 cases and 2887 packages of hospital garments, surgeon supplies and clothing, valued at over $500,000. Such donations have been sent to the Red Cross warehouse, donated by the Bush Terminal at Brooklyn and have been packed and prepared for shipping by a force paid by Cleveland Dodge.

training. One generation of well trained operators will disseminate information concerning the operation of gasoline machines so that the future generations will absorb the knowledge as unconsciously and as thoroughly as farmers' sons now learn about horses and their care.

L. A. Moorhouse suggests through an Agriculture Department bulletin that manure spreaders which depreciate in value 11.67 per cent annually on an average, can be used to good advantage in conveying mangolds, sugar beets or turnips from the field to the cellar. A simple adjustment will enable the operator to save considerable time, as well as the task of unloading with a shovel. The cylinder or spreader is first removed from the end of the box and suitable end board is set in place, the latter being held by an iron bar or rod. When the load is taken to the cellar, the end board can be lifted out readily and the roots may be rolled into the trap door merely by putting on the crank which connects with the apron shaft and turning by hand until the entire load is discharged.

RAISING POULTRY For PROFIT

By John Wildig

I am sending you this article from Coal City, Indiana where I am engaged in the installation of a large job of plumbing. At the farm where I am staying they have about 256 White Leghorn hens and a great many chicks. They collect from 160 to 200 eggs each day. All their eggs are shipped to Terre Haute and they receive 21 cents a dozen for them. This person feeds mashed food each morning and mixed grain at night, with all the milk the hens wish to drink. They have the run of the orchard and are comfortably housed. The houses are sprayed occasionally with chloro naphtholeum two teaspoons full to a half gallon of water. This eliminated the lice and nit, but never spray your houses in the afternoon because this dampness will give your hens cold at night. Spray when the sun is warm in the morning, and the houses will be feely dry by night. In winter you must use your own judgment.

I have been asked several times recently what I consider the best breed of chickens to raise for general purposes. Well, I feel inclined to answer White Wyandotte. However, you must not think that to learn how to care for a flock of chickens you must practice on a mongrel flock, for your experience with them will be both discouraging and misleading and the time and money spent on them might better be spent on birds more worthy of both time and money. Before you decide what breed of fowl to purchase read what you can find about the different breeds. Go to your state fair and poultry shows and study the birds, converse with the exhibitors and don't forget your county fair. Those who have full blooded stock will find it of advantage to show them at our county fair this fall. I expect to show some chickens and I shall be pleased to assist anyone who desires to show their stock. Let us get together and see if we can not improve in the next year the many flocks in our county that are sadly in need of improvement.

As I have said before, do not expect something for nothing. Do not feed much corn in hot weather; it is too fattening. Your hens can not be profitable when fed alone on corn. Vary their diet and feed a little condition powder and you will have little trouble in getting eggs all summer.

political opposition." This statement was made to Horace H. Herr, Editor of the Indiana Daily Times by a prominent German in Berlin on March 4 when the former was in the German capital investigating war conditions for the Indianapolis paper.

Mr. Herr was asked by the United Press to detail the opinion held in Germany concerning the internal difficulties of the United States would experience in case of serious difficulty with Germany. He wrote the following.

BY HORACE H. HERR

(Editor of The Indiana Daily Times)
(Written for United Press.)

If German diplomacy had enjoyed the same efficiency as the German army Kaiser William would not be surrounded by a wall of steel and the sympathy of the neutral nations would not now be alienated from his empire.

The most startling discovery I made while in German Empire last March was the fact that the German people have been led to believe that the 12,000,000 Germans who have come to the United States in recent years are not at heart loyal citizens of their adopted country.

Germany is a great country to forecast and prepare for possibilities. She assumes in many instances that a possibility is a probability, and in view of what I saw and heard in Frankfurt, Berlin and other German cities, the possibility of the United States being drawn into the war, was considered days before the maelstrom was precipitated.

Germany has acted on the theory, and she is now acting on it, that the United States would be unable to assume an aggressive policy toward her because the 12,000,000 German citizens in this country would not permit such action.

A prominent—and intelligent—Berlin German said to me on March 4 "We have more than 10,000,000 loyal subjects in the United States, and in deciding on a militant policy towards the German Empire, your government will not only have to reckon with them but may be surprised to find that their alliance with the Irish is strong enough to present serious political opposition."

This statement opened my eyes and I began to sound every German I met, on the subject. Some of them were really laboring under the impression that the revolt of Progressives in 1912 was an incipient rebellion against the government. All of them expressed the conviction that "once a German always a German" would apply to the German American citizens who, in the German understanding, looks upon citizenship in the United States as commercial expedient, a business asset which does not, in any depreciate his loyalty to his Fatherland.

This is the logic of the "Deutschland Uber Alles" creed which has been taught in Germany for generations. This conclusion has been fostered and encouraged by the utterances of some of our Congressmen who have a touch of German blood in their veins for while we at home take their statements and weigh them along with the political effect after which the speaker is striving, Germany looks upon them as the expression of a belligerent element which really threatens our governmental stability. If public officials could appreciate how much mischief a public utterance can make through its effect on a foreign nation, our congressional records would be less voluminous than they are now and quite as interesting.

To put it plainly and frankly Germany seems to be laboring under the impression that before America can attack the German Empire she must first whip the "over 10,000,000 loyal subjects" with which the German mind peoples the United States.

RUSHVILLE PARTY RID OF KIDNEY PAINS

Uses Wonderful New Remedy With Most Remarkable Success.

Mr. J. T. Colecord of 833 West 10th street, Rushville, Ind., says: "Some time ago I began to suffer with Kidney trouble. My Bladder was in a terrible condition and at times pained me a great deal. I would have to get up 8 or 10 times at night. The small of my back gave me a great deal of pain also. Sometimes I could hardly lay down on account of the very distressing pain. For these ills someone recommended Lloyd's Kidney and Rheumatism Tablets to me and I decided to try them. The results were great. I do not suffer any more. I feel so much better that I am glad to tell others of this wonderful new scientific prescription. Don't suffer another day but take my advice and get a box of Lloyd's. I found instant relief."

WESTFIELD IS CONTEST WINNER

Rushville and Shelbyville Tied For
Second Place on Points and
Per Cents Decide it.

PLACING LOCAL BOY THIRD

Oratorical of High School League
Furnishes First Chance to See
New Auditorium.

Landis M. Moore, of Westfield speaking on the subject, "The War and World Peace," won the oratorical contest last night, which was the closing event of the annual meeting of the Central Indiana High School League. Shelbyville was second and Rushville third.

Harry Schmalzel, the representative of the local high school, was barely nosed out of second position. He and Horatio Sexton, from the Shelbyville high school, tied on points and it was necessary for the judges to decide their position by per cent. Their points totaled seven each and their per cent totaled 272 and 270 respectively, giving Shelbyville the place by the narrow margin of two.

Ralph Nicholson of Richmond was given fourth place by the judges and Russell Williams of Sheridan was fifth.

The winner had a timely subject, and he gave his oration well. Although there are those who may have thought his presence was not the best of the five, his subject matter, coupled with his fine enunciation and convincing method of speaking, evidently won him first place in the minds of the judges.

Harry Schmalzel's subject, "The Power of Conviction," gave him a good oration on which to display his ability, and he did it well. It was believed that a slight hesitation near the opening of his speech cut down his grade. He was very convincing in his method of speech and his gestures were natural and timely.

Horatio Sexton, of Shelbyville, with the exception of the local orator, had the largest following in the audience and he was given a rousing ovation when he arose to speak. His subject was "Admiral Farragut." There were some persons in the audience who believed the honor would fall to Shelbyville after he had spoken. He also had the benefit of the last place on the program.

Ralph Nicholson who spoke first on the subject, "The New South," represented the Richmond high school. He was given next to last place.

He was taken to the blacksmith shop when the accident occurred.

CITY BEGINS IT'S PART IN CLEAN-UP

Wagons Start Hauling Winter's Accumulation of Trash and Will Continue Rest of Week.

HEALTH SURVEY COMES NEXT

The city wagon started work this morning on the final lap of "clean up" week. The wagons started hauling from the northeastern part of the city and will gradually work westward until the entire city has been covered.

"All of the alleys will be cleaned by the end of the week and then next week the city board of health will make a sanitary survey of the city. The city refused to haul anything that could be burned and would not touch ashes. It was pointed out that property owners should think enough of their own premises to haul away the ashes, that accumulated during the winter.

The offer of the city to haul away and aid in the clean up of the city met with response in all parts and it is believed that the city health board will find little to improve on when the sanitary survey is made.

DISTRICT MEETING TODAY.

The annual district meeting of the Daughters of Pocahontas was being held in Arlington today. Most of the afternoon was to be devoted to the registration of guests and at four o'clock the degrees was to be conferred on all past Pocahontases. The degree work will be conferred tonight by Lurline council No. 296 of this city and Alfarata council No. 5 of Indianapolis. Grand officers of the Pocahontas and Red Men were expected to be present. Twenty councils in the ten counties of the district were represented.

CROWD GROWS AS THE TIME NEARS

Forty Automobiles From Rushville
Are Promised For Trip to Greensburg Love Feast.

LIST IS GIVEN OUT TODAY

In Addition, Delegation Will be Augmented by at Least Fifteen
at Milroy Friday.

That even a larger crowd than was estimated yesterday will attend the fourth district Republican love feast at Greensburg Friday evening, was the belief today. The committee has the names of forty automobile owners from Rushville and near vicinity who will go and who are making up their own parties. In addition, sixty tickets have been sold in the southern part of the county and it is known that several from Manilla will attend.

Fair weather is promised for tomorrow, and this it is anticipated, will serve to augment the crowd because a number have been holding back for fear that it would rain.

The banquet will be one of the big features of the love feast. It will take place promptly at six-thirty o'clock Friday evening. The tickets are selling at fifty cents each and when the supply here is exhausted, persons desiring to go may leave their names and fifty cents at Johnson's, Lytle's or Hargrove & Mullin's drug stores any time up to Friday noon and they will get a ticket on their arrival in Greensburg. This is an extra concession which has been granted to the Rush county delegation. County Chairman Fon Riggs will telephone the reservations to Greensburg.

A crowd of at least eight hundred Republicans will attend the banquet. The fourth district is anxious to outdo the other districts which have already held love feasts. Special excursions to Greensburg will be run from Columbus and Indianapolis and there will be a large delegation from the Columbia Club. Shelbyville will also send a delegation and there will be present approximately twenty-five Republican candidates for the nominations for the offices of United States senator, governor and the other state offices.

The auto caravan will leave the Windsor hotel corner promptly at four o'clock and will go by way of Milroy where it will be joined by the delegation from the southern part of the county. Those who have no way to go may see any of the following automobile owners who have consented to take their machines:

Chauncey W. Duncan, Fon Riggs, Tom Hiner, Albert Winship, Owen L. Carr, Will Jay, Walter Hubbard, Frank Capp, Frank Green, Hal Green, E. E. Polk, Theodore Abercrombie, Willard Amos, Will McMillin, Henry Schrader, Earl Winship, Charles Brooks, Theodore Reed, John H. Frazee, Elmer Humes, Walter Duke, Joe Cowing, Odice Jones, Ben Norris, Will Alexander, John W. Anderson, John C. Blackledge, Frank Abercrombie, Phil Wilk, W. R. Jinnett, Dr. J. C. (By United Press.) Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—The Woman's Franchise League of Indiana has tabulated the records of the congressmen and to be ready when they apply for re-election to oppose them or endorse them according to the stand they take on bills in which women are interested. The record in detail follows:

Senator Kern (Dem.) Not voting on suffrage amendment.

Senator Shively (Dem.) Not voting on suffrage amendment.

1. Lieb (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but favor child labor bill.

2. Cullop (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

3. Cox (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

4. Dixon (Dem.) Against suffrage prohibition but for child labor bill.

5. Moss (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

6. Gray (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

7. Korbley (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition but for child labor bill.

8. Adair (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

9. Morrison (Dem.) Against suffrage, against prohibition and not voting child labor bill.

10. Peterson (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, for child labor bill.

11. Rauch (Dem.) Against suffrage and prohibition, but for child labor bill.

12. Cline (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition and for child labor bill.

13. Barnhart (Dem.) For suffrage, against prohibition, and not voting on child labor bill.

The women call attention to the fact that all save Korbley of the Seventh district, and Peterson of the Tenth, are returning to the next congress.

"Reports have been brought to me that several fishing crafts have sighted floating bodies," said Consul Frost.

CAN MEET ON BASIS OF AMERICAN NOTE

This Reported to be the Opinion of the German Embassy at Washington Today.

IS PLEASED WITH ITS TONE

(By United Press.) Washington, May 13.—The German embassy believes Germany and America can meet on the basis of the American note if outlines of the note's contents as printed today are correct. The German embassy does not say so officially. Ambassador Bernstorff refused to talk other than to issue an absolute denial of statement purporting to reflect the embassy's views. This alleged statement declared Germany's reception of the American demands would be a suave but firm refusal to accept the conditions laid down.

Beyond the denial, the ambassador refused to go on, saying "The matter is now between the two governments." From sources close to the embassy it was possible to gather definite assurances the German representatives in Washington are pleased with the tone said to be taken in the note.

BRITISH WARSHIP SUNK BY TORPEDO

Goliath is Sent Down in Dardanelles
and Loss of Life is Placed at Five Hundred.

OF SAME CLASS AS THE OCEAN

(By United Press.) London, May 13.—The British warship Goliath has been torpedoed in the Dardanelles, according to an official announcement from the admiralty this afternoon. The admiralty placed the loss of life at five hundred.

The Goliath was a 12,950 ton battleship of the same class as the Ocean, sunk inside the Straits on March 18. On the same day the battleship Irresistible and French battleship Bouvet were torpedoed and sunk. The Goliath was 418 feet in length over all and 74 feet at her beam. She carried four twelve-inch guns and twelve six-inch guns and was considered a very formidable warship. The Goliath was built in 1896. She had a speed of 18.2 knots and a complement of 750 men.

GERMANY MUST ACT NOT QUIBBLE

America's Last Word in Lusitania
Incident is Going Forward and
Will be Public Friday.

OPEN DEMAND FOR REDRESS

Position is That of a Dear Friend
Who Realizes His Friendship
Has Been Violated.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN
(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, May 13.—Germany must act, not quibble, nor promise.

Summed up in a sentence, that is the attitude of the United States in the negotiations growing out of the torpedoing of the Lusitania with its toll of American lives. America's last word is going forward to Germany this afternoon. The note was formally approved by the president at 10:15 a. m. today, signed an hour later by Secretary of State Bryan, and immediately turned over to confidential secretaries to be reduced to code.

"You can say that the note is now going forward," said Secretary Bryan at noon. "It will make between 1,200 and 1,500 words and will be made public Friday morning. It will be in Ambassador Gerard's hands not later than an early hour tomorrow and he will present it to the German foreign office without delay."

It was evident that the attitude of every high government official today was that they realized that America's affairs had reached a crisis. The die is cast in the president's latest note.

The note sets forth in language that can not be misinterpreted that the United States considered the killing of more than 100 Americans as a monstrous offense. It is characterized as an open act of hostility that admits no excuse. The United States expects all of these acts to be disavowed. It also expects that Germany will pledge itself to see that there is no repetition of them.

The position is that of a dear friend who realize that his friendship has been violated without warning. There is no note of apology. It is a frank and open demand for redress that the United States makes it plain it has a right to expect, as the result of the years of genuine friendship between two nations.

With his work on America's note to Germany finished, Pres. Wilson left the white house for a short automobile ride at 10:15 a. m. today. The note had been sent to the state department. Experts there were coding it as rapidly as possible for transmission to Ambassador Gerard in Berlin. There were reports that a portion had already started.

Selling a Propaganda

Over in England a recent newspaper campaign in the interest of a certain public policy has attracted widespread attention.

The author when questioned about it said:

I am not preaching. I am selling a code of morals.

"I am a business man and I choose the way of the business man—newspaper advertising."

The public discussion this idea has provoked is another evidence that the newspaper reader is a responsive individual.

WESTFIELD IS CONTEST WINNER

place by the judges. Russell Williams, of Sheridan, who spoke on the subject, "Poverty and Crime" was in last position. He spoke second on the program.

The chairman of the meeting, announced that the medals for the first, second and third prize winners in the track and field meet, the cup for the winning relay team, the banner for the team winning the track and field meet and the medal for the winner of the oratorical, had failed to arrive on time and that they would be sent to the respective schools just as soon as possible.

The adherents of the contesting orators entertained the audience with their yells and songs before the program opened and while the judges were returning their decision. Rushville far outnumbered the visitors in rooters and the guests of the local high school did not have opportunities to display their outlay of noise-making inventions. The whole Rushville crowd was loyal to the local representative and gave a prolonged greeting of applause when he got up to speak and when he finished.

The oratorical furnished the first opportunity of Rushville people to see the new auditorium. It was admired by several hundred who attended the contest. There were few vacant seats in the house. The auditorium is thoroughly modern. The stage is large and raised enough so that it is not hard to see from any part of the room. There is also a large balcony which will accommodate many people. The auditorium is fitted with opera chairs. The walls are finished in white and the indirect lighting system is used. The stage scenery was all in place for the oratorical last night. The beautiful curtain was the gift of the class of 1914.

A report was circulated yesterday evening that it had been found impossible to use the new auditorium and that the oratorical would take place in the Coliseum. This false rumor caused many persons to walk to the city park.

Look at Tire Prices from the Inside Out!

All these built-in extras, which mean much more in mileage at no extra first cost. Compare cross sections, compare prices.

Fig. 1. FABRIC—Extra layer, highest grade fabric. Not found in ordinary tires. 4 ply instead of 3 in the 3 inch tire—1 ply instead of 2 in the 5 inch tire. Firestone extra measure that makes for most mileage.

Fig. 2. COATING—Extra coating of finest rubber between fabric layers in Firestone—not in the ordinary.

Fig. 3. CUSHION—A shock absorber—protects fabric. A thick layer of fine Up-River Penn. Not found in the ordinary tire. The section shows it—the wear proves it.

Fig. 4. BREAKER STRIP—An extra strong, thick, breaker strip, insures balanced distribution of road shocks and prevents tread separation.

Fig. 5. TREAD—Tough, buoyant and scientifically angled to prevent skidding. Built high in the center, insuring maximum wear. You get 7,000 to 10,000 to 15,000 more tread thickness than in the ordinary, depending on size of tire.

Fig. 6. SIDE WALL—Thick and flexible to withstand bending and grinding action. Will not chip or crack.

Fig. 7. BEAD—Extra strong and molded in one piece—not a patch applied to a straight-side type as in the ordinary large size tire. Accurately shaped to insure perfect seating to rim.

A Marked Difference
 On one hand we have Theodore Roosevelt urging immediate and drastic action against Germany with respect to the Lusitania case and on the other Wm. H. Taft counseling patience and calmness in the present international crisis. Here we see the marked difference between two former presidents of the United States. No doubt Theodore Roosevelt believes what he advises, but he is entirely too impetuous and we believe that the majority of the people do not agree with his opinions. While it is quiet true no one wants to see his country made the doormat for European powers, there are few who would like to see the United States rush ruthlessly into war when they consider the suffering that would result, not considering the financial loss that would be entailed.

There isn't any question but that the United States is respected abroad. The United States of America won its right to a high pinnacle in the eyes of the world when it, with an inefficient army—a mere handful of men—whipped the trained soldiers of the British. No one denies but that the United States is held in the same high esteem by most if not all foreign powers. The United States, in its marvelous growth and development, has been the wonder and admiration of the world, and who is there to say we shall follow the path of war-torn Europe and suffer the horrifying consequences.

We believe Former President Taft is right when says "There are worse things than war, but delay due to calm deliberation can not change the situation or minimize the effect of what we finally conclude to do." Continuing, he said in an address before the Union League at Philadelphia:

"With the present condition of war in Europe, our action, if it is to be extreme, will not lose efficacy by giving time to people, whose war it will be, to know what they are facing.

"Under our constitution the President conducts our foreign affairs until congress finds it necessary to declare war. Upon him is the acute responsibility in such a crisis. If he were to yield to the cry extremists, and summon congress to take extreme measures, he would have great influence with congress under such a provocation. Indeed, the impulse to such action has usually been stronger with congress than with the executive.

"Now it may be that a series of acts of inhumanity and violations of the laws of war, to our national detriment and against our citizens, may force us on and lead our people to believe that whatever the cost no other courses is open to us.

"But we must bear in mind that if we have a war it is the people who must pay with lives and money the cost of it, and therefore they should not be hurried into the sacrifice until it is clear that they wish it, and know what they are doing when they wish it.

"A demand for war that can not survive the passion of the first days of public indignation and will not endure the test of delay and deliberation by all the people is not one that should be yielded to."

The President he said, was acting like Washington, Lincoln and McKinley in trying to avoid war. In the present situation it was imperative that he should know the opinion of the country without regard to prejudice.

"The task of the President is a heavy one," continued Mr. Taft. "He is acting for the whole country. He is anxious to find a way out of the present difficulty without war.

"Before party, before ourselves, we are for our country. That is what he is working for. Shall we not stand by him in it? He will not surrender our country's rights. It may be necessary that for a hundred lives and the method of their taking we should lose thousands and hundreds of thousands of lives. The national honor and interest may ultimately demand it, but time for serious thought and clearly weighing the consequences will not prejudice the justice of our cause or the opportunity to vindicate it."

If it is true that dead men tell no tales, some people will have a lone-some time after they shuffle off.

Shake out another reef of your patience. Spring will surely be here when it gets here.

Survey of Note Sent By United States to Germany

Washington, May 13.—The principal points in the United States note to Germany concerning the sinking of the Lusitania are substantially as follows:

1. The United States government calls attention to the various incidents in the war zone proclaimed by Germany around the British Isles; the sinking of the British liner Falaba, with the loss of Leon C. Thresher, an American; an attack by German airmen on the American steamer Cushing; the torpedoing without warning of the American steamer Gulf Light, flying the stars and stripes, and finally the torpedoing without warning of the Lusitania with its loss of more than 1,000 lives of noncombatants, among them more than 100 Americans.
2. These acts are declared to be indefensible under international law. The United States points out that it never admitted Germany's right to do them, and warned the imperial government that it would be held to a "strict accountability" for attacks on American vessels or lives. A strict accounting, therefore, is now asked from Germany.
3. The unusual financial reparation will be sought, although Germany is in effect reminded that no reparation can restore the lives of those sacrificed in the sinking of the Lusitania and other ships.
4. Expressions of regret may comply with the legal precedents, but they are valueless unless accompanied by a cessation of the practices endangering lives of noncombatants.
5. The right of neutrals to travel any point of the high seas on neutral or belligerent merchantmen is asserted.
6. In the name of humanity and international law, the United States demands a guarantee that these rights will be respected, and that there be no repetition of these attacks on merchantmen carrying noncombatants.
7. The giving of warnings to the American public without officially communicating them to the United States government is commented on in connection with the German Embassy's printed advertisement before the sailing of the Lusitania, but irrespective of the failure to advise the American government of Germany's purpose the point is made that notice of an intention to do an unlawful act neither justified nor legalized it.
8. The suggestion is conveyed that the German government, of course, could not have intended to destroy innocent lives, and that consequently the German submarine commanders must have misunderstood their instructions. The American government indicates its hope that this will be true and a cessation of the unlawful practices thereby will result.
9. In conclusion, Germany's attention is called to the earnestness of the government people of the United States in this situation. It is made plain that the United States will leave nothing undone, either in diplomatic representation or other action, to obtain a compliance by Germany to the requests made.

GERMANY MUST ACT NOT QUIBBLE

It was believed the communication would reach the Berlin foreign office by tonight, European time.

The latest information was that it would not be made public until known to have been delivered. Its general purport had already been unofficially outlined, however, and officials admitted that these forecasts were substantially correct.

One point, however, was emphasized—unofficially: "The note was so expressed as to call for a prompt and definite action accordingly—not for mere promises or by further discussion."

The air about the white house was one of finality. The government has acted. It was up to Germany to speak and act next.

The president received more than 200 telegrams today. They were without exception strongly commendatory of his course.

The definite statement was made that he had not abandoned his trip Friday to New York to review the fleet; he will go by water in the presidential yacht; he will be in constant wireless touch with the capital.

Leakless Inner Tubes
Goodyear Laminated Tubes
Built Layer on Layer—Extra Thick

Here is something every motorist should know.

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are built of many thin layers—each of pure rubber—vulcanized together. No flaw can be hidden as in a thick piece of rubber. It is seen and eliminated. Every layer is perfect.

Such a Tube can't leak. And our valve patch can't leak, because it is part of the Tube and not stuck on.

Remember that. Many a tire trouble is due to leaky Tubes.

Tube prices this year are reduced 20 per cent. So these layer Tubes, extra-thick, now cost about the same as others.

EIGHT RECORDS WERE SMASHED

Sheridan Strong in Track Events and Won Meet With 41 Points—Westfield Close Second.

SHELBYVILLE WAS THIRD

New Marks Made For All Field Events of Central Indiana High School League.

Eight Central Indiana High School league records were broken here yesterday at the second annual track and field meet, which was won by Sheridan. The score was as follows: Sheridan, 41; Westfield, 38; Shelbyville, 22; Richmond, 3; Rushville 2.

It was a pretty race between Sheridan and Westfield. Superior work in the track events was the deciding point for Sheridan. Sheridan copped the one hundred yard dash, the 880 yard run, the 220 yard dash and the 440 yard dash. Westfield was best in the field events and a few more winners in the track events would have given them the meet.

The records that were broken were the 880 yard run, the 220 yard dash, the 120 yard hurdle, the mile run, the high jump, the discus hurl, the shot put and the broad jump.

The star of the meet was Richardson, of Sheridan. Richardson won the 100 yard dash, the 220 yard dash, and the discus hurl. He won second place in the shot put and second place in the broad jump. Linzy Armstrong, a colored athlete from Westfield was a close second to Richardson. Armstrong is the holder of several records established last year at the first meeting of the league in Shelbyville. Armstrong easily won both the high and low hurdle and the high jump. The colored boy was second in the discus hurl and third in the 100 yard dash and 220 yard dash.

In the very first event of the afternoon Armstrong, the Westfield athlete broke his own high jump record going over the bar at 5 feet 4 3/4 inches. His former record was 5 feet 3 inches. Dallis, of Richmond was second and Fred Keeling, of Shelbyville was third.

The 100 yard dash furnished a nice race between Richardson of Sheridan and Forrest Keeling of Shelbyville. Richardson won out by a distance of inches. The time was

NEW CENTRAL RECORDS.

- 880 yard run—Nay (Sheridan). Time 2:11.
- 220 yard dash—Richardson (Sheridan). Time :23 4/5.
- 120 yard hurdle—Armstrong (Westfield.) Time :18.
- 1 mile run—Artie Davis (Westfield.) Time 5:05 1/5.
- High jump—Armstrong (Westfield.) Height 5 feet 4 3/4 inches.
- Discus hurl—Richardson (Sheridan.) Distance 100 feet 4 inches.
- Shot put—Rawlings (Sheridan.) Distance 41 feet 6 inches.
- Broad jump—Keeling (Shelbyville.) distance 21 feet 6 inches.

11 seconds. The 880 yard run was a race between Nay of Sheridan, Todd of Westfield and Tonner of Shelbyville. They finished in the order named. The time was 2:11 setting a new mark. The old record was 2:14 1/2.

After winning the 100 yard dash Richardson came back and won the 220 yard dash. Then to add more honor to himself and his school he went right out and hurled the discus for a distance of 100 feet 4 inches. Rushville's first point came in the low hurdle when Kelso finished third. Armstrong won the event with Lynn of Westfield second.

Forrest Keeling of Shelbyville won the broad jump in an easy manner. In his first trial Keeling jumped 21 feet and 6 inches. He never equalled this mark in any of the other trials and the record stood.

The pole vault was won by Lynn of Westfield. He went over the bar at 9 feet 9 inches. Rapp of Shelbyville gave him a hard race for first honors. In an attempt to break the state record Lynn failed.

The relay race was won by Shelbyville with Westfield second. The relay race did not count points in the regular track and field meet. The summaries follow:

100-Yard Dash—Richardson (Sheridan), first; Forrest Keeling (Shelbyville) second; Armstrong (Westfield) third. Time—11 seconds.

880-Yard Dash—Nay (Sheridan), first; Todd (Westfield), second; Tonner (Shelbyville), third Time—2:11

220-Yard Dash—Richardson (Sheridan), first; Forrest Keeling (Shelbyville), second; Armstrong (Westfield), third. Time—23 4/5.

120-Yard Hurdle—Armstrong (Westfield), first; Lynn (Westfield), second; Kelso (Rushville), third. Time—18.

220 Yard Hurdle—Armstrong (Westfield), first; Rawlings (Sheridan), second; McKay (Shelbyville), third. Time—28 4/5.

440-Yard Dash—Nay (Sheridan), first; Smith (Shelbyville), second; Tittsworth (Rushville), third. Time—37.

1 mile Run—Artie Davis (Westfield), first; E. Davis (Westfield), second; Yarding (Shelbyville), third. Time—5:05 1/5.

High Jump—Armstrong (Westfield), first; Dallings (Richmond), second; Fred Keeling (Shelbyville), third. Height—5 feet 4 3/4 inches.

Discus Throw—Richardson (Sheridan), first; Armstrong (Westfield), second; Rawlings (Sheridan), third. Distance—100 feet 4 inches.

Shotput—Rawlings (Sheridan), first; Richardson (Sheridan), second; Harding (Shelbyville), third. Distance—41 feet 6 inches.

Broad Jump—Forrest Keeling (Shelbyville), first; Richardson (Sheridan), second; Nay (Sheridan), third. Distance—21 feet 6 inches.

Pole Vault—Lynn (Westfield), first; Rapp (Shelbyville), second; Gifford (Westfield), third. Height—9 feet 9 inches.

HAMILTON COMING TO BEAT RUSHERS

In Past Two Seasons Hoovens Lost

Six Games and Two of These to Vordenburg.

GAME WILL START AT 2:30

In the Hamilton Hoovens, the attraction against the Rushers Sunday at Edgewater park, the fans will see one of the fastest teams in Ohio. In the past 48 games played by Hoovens they have lost only 6 games and one of the peculiar features about this record is that Earl Vordenburg, Rushville pitcher is credited with two out of six of these defeats.

Because Vordy has beaten the Hoovens twice they are coming here with the intentions of getting revenge and will try every way to win. Manager Page has the same team in line this year as in former years and in Franz and King he has two pitchers who have defeated such teams as the Shamrocks, All-Pros, Hello Boys, Blue Licks, Middletown, Greenville and other fast teams. The fans can expect one of the best games of the season from the Hoovens.

The game will be called at 2:30 o'clock and Jack England of this city will umpire.

school pupils and the help which he received from E. B. Marlatt his instructor. Without him, the contestant said, he could have accomplished very little.

Mr. Marlatt declared he valued highly the work of Harry Schmalzel as well as the other contestants in the preliminary. He said that he enjoyed training them because they all responded to his efforts. He urged that the interest in oratory be kept at a high pitch and the work go on. He closed with Edwin Vance Cook's poem, "How Did You Die."

R. W. Burns, coach of the track team, gave expression to his appreciation of the efforts put forth by the members of the team. He said it took several years to develop a good track team because track athletics require more time, endurance and natural ability. He declared he was well satisfied with the work of the team. Both Mr. Burns and Mr.

Marlatt were applauded by the high school pupils when they arose to speak.

Miss Nelle Baldwin said that she wanted to speak for the girls of the high school. She said it was evident from the way the girls rooted for the team that if there had been a shortage of boys, it could have been filled by girls.

Frank Forry praised the persistence of the members of the track team and contestants in the oratorical and complimented them upon their work.

Miss Genevieve Brown told a story to illustrate that wind and no work accomplishes nothing and complimented the high school and its representatives. She said if some inland cities would suck as hard as they blew, they would be great seaports.

Principal Wilson closed the jollification meeting with a Tom Marshall story that left the high school in fine humor.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat and take a glass of Salts to flush out Kidneys—Drink plenty water.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Selling Is MORE than Trading Stock for Money!

Selling is part of the scheme of business. Most anyone can sell once, but selling so you can create permanent customers is selling successfully. That is why we carry the large stock of buggies we have on our sample floor for prospective customers or purchasers to make their selections from. They don't have to take something they don't want, as we carry every style of buggy that there is a demand for. Then after the customer has made his selection from our stock we tell him exactly what the buggy is and it has to be just as we represent it or we make it that way. The customer takes no chances. He is sure to get just what he pays for. ONE sale reduces itself to a confidence game unless the buyer is perfectly satisfied. Satisfaction sends a customer away with a smile that won't come off. That is why our buggy business has grown. We have found out how to hold customers after we get them and every satisfied customer is bound to bring a new customer sooner or later. Right now our stock of buggies is complete and if you are needing a buggy come in and make your selection. We have the style you want and we would be glad to have you for one of our satisfied customers. We know you will be glad when you give us your vehicle business, so do it now.

Rushville Boy Who Escaped From State Farm is Taken Back to Putnam County.

MUST GO TO STATE PRISON

Delbert "Buddy" Newman was taken to Greencastle yesterday afternoon by a deputy sheriff of Putnam county, where he will face a charge in the circuit court there of having escaped from the Indiana state farm. Newman stated that he would plead guilty and in this event will get a sentence of from two to five years in the state prison at Michigan City. The new state law does not provide for the sending of escaped prisoners to the reformatory at Jeffersonville and for this reason Newman will serve his sentence at Michigan City.

The deputy sheriff told Sheriff Cavitt that he took a boy under 21 years of age to Michigan City 13 week. In all five men have escaped from the penal farm Newman admitted he did wrong but stated that the thought of having to spend two years at the penal farm drove him to escape.

SYNOPSIS.

In her apartment at the Leland Ells, daughter of Lord Ashleigh, is murdered and the Ashleigh diamond necklace stolen. The New York police place the case in the hands of Sanford Quest, known and feared as the master criminologist of the world. He takes Lenora, Ella's maid, to his own apartments and through hypnotism and the use of electro-telepathic appliances discovers her connection with the crime, recovers the diamonds and arrests the murderer. Macdougall, Lenora's husband, though nearly trapped by his death in a tough tenement house while engaged in the work, Lenora becomes one of Quest's assistants. The detective is called in to investigate the theft of the skeleton of an ape, of Lord Ashleigh. Macdougall escapes while on his way to prison. A string of diamonds is mysteriously stolen from Mrs. Rheinholdt during a reception.

THE POCKET WIRELESS.

CHAPTER VIII.

Mr. Sanford Quest sat in his favorite chair, his cigar inclined toward the left-hand corner of his mouth, his attention riveted upon a small instrument which he was supporting upon his knee. He glanced across the room to where Lenora was bending over her desk.

"We've done it this time, young woman," he declared triumphantly. "It's all O. K., working like a little peach."

Lenora rose and came toward him. "Is that the pocket wireless?"

He nodded.

"I've had Morrison out at Harlem all the morning to test it," he told her. "I've sent him at least half a dozen messages from this easy chair, and got the replies. How are you getting on with the code?"

"Not so badly for a stupid person," Lenora replied.

Laura, who had been busy with some papers at the farther end of the room, came over and joined them. "Say, it's a dandy little affair, that, Mr. Quest," she exclaimed. "I had a try with it, a day or so ago. Jim spoke to me from Fifth avenue."

"We've got it tuned to a shade now," Quest declared. "Equipped with this simple little device, you can speak to me from anywhere up to ten or a dozen miles."

Quest rose to his feet and moved restlessly about the room.

"Say, girls," he confessed, "this is the first time in my life I have been in a fix like this. Two cases on hand and nothing doing with either of them. Criminologist, indeed! Whose box is this?"

Quest had paused suddenly in front of an oak sideboard which stood against the wall. Occupying a position upon it of some prominence was a small black box, whose presence there seemed to him unfamiliar. Laura came over to his side and looked at it also in puzzled fashion.

"Never saw it before in my life," she answered.

Quest granted. "H'm! No one else has been in the room, and it hasn't been empty for more than ten minutes," he remarked. "Well, let's see what's inside, anyway."

He lifted off the lid. There was nothing in the interior but a sheet of paper folded up. Quest smoothed it out with his hand. They all leaned over and read the following words, written in an obviously disguised hand:

You have embarked on a new study—anthropology. What characteristic strikes you most forcibly in connection with it? Cunning? The necklace might be where the skeleton is. Why not begin at the beginning?

The note was unsigned, but in the spot where a signature might have been there was a rough pen drawing of two hands, with fingers extended, talon fashion, menacingly, as though poised to strike at some unseen enemy. Quest, after their first moment of stupefaction, whistled softly.

"The hands!" he muttered.

"What hands?" Lenora asked.

"The hands that gripped Mrs. Rheinholdt by the throat," he reminded them. "Don't you remember? Hands without arms?"

There was another brief, almost stupefied silence. Then Laura broke into speech.

"What I want to know is," she demanded, "who brought the thing here?"

"A most daring exploit, anyway," Quest declared. "If we could answer your question, Laura, we could solve the whole riddle. We are up against something, and no mistake."

"The hand which placed that box there," Quest continued slowly, "is capable of even more wonderful things. We must be cautious. Hello!"

The door had opened. The professor stood upon the threshold.

"I trust that I have done right in coming up?" he inquired.

"Quite right, professor," Quest assured him. "They know well enough downstairs that I am always at home to you. Come in."

"I am so anxious to learn," the professor continued eagerly, "whether there is any news—of my skeleton."

"Not yet, professor, I am sorry to say," Quest replied. "Come in and shut the door."

"There is a young lady here," he said, "who caught me up upon the landing. She, too, I believe, wishes to see you."

He threw open the door and stood on one side. A young woman came a little hesitatingly into the room. Her hair was plainly brushed back, and she wore the severe dress of the Salvation Army.

"Want to see me, young lady?" Quest asked.

She held out a book.

"My name is Miss Quigg," she said. "I want to ask you for a subscription to our funds."

Quest frowned a little. "Very well, Miss Quigg, you shall have a donation. I am busy today, but call at the same hour tomorrow and my secretary shall have a check ready for you."

The girl smiled her gratitude. The professor laid his hand upon her arm as she passed.

"Young lady," he observed, "you seem very much in earnest about your work."

"It is only the people in earnest, sir," she answered, "who can do any good in the world. My work is worth being in earnest about."

"You compel my admiration. My most respectful admiration. May I, too, be permitted?"

He drew out a pocketbook and passed over toward her a little wad of notes.

"It is so kind of you," she murmured. "We never have any hesitation in accepting money. May I know your name?"

"It is not necessary," the professor answered. "You can enter me," he added, as he held open the door for her, "as a friend—or would you prefer a pseudonym?"

"A pseudonym, if you please," she begged. "We have so many who send us sums of money as friends. Anything will do."

The professor glanced around the room.

"What pseudonym shall I adopt?" he ruminated. "Shall I say that an oak sideboard gives you five hundred dollars or a Chippendale sofa? Or," he added, his eyes resting for a moment upon the little box, "a black box?"

The two girls from the other side of the table started. Even Quest swung suddenly around. The professor, as though pleased with his fancy, nodded as his fingers played with the lid.

"Yes, that will do very nicely," he decided. "Put me down—'Black Box,' five hundred dollars."

The girl took out her book and began to write. The professor, with a little farewell bow, crossed the room toward Quest. Lenora moved toward the door.

"Let me see you out," she said to the girl pleasantly.

Lenora opened the door. Both girls started. Only a few feet away Craig was standing, his head a little thrust forward. For a moment the quiet self-respect of his manner seemed to have deserted him. He seemed at a loss for words.

"What do you want?" Lenora demanded.

"I was waiting for my master," Craig explained.

"Why not downstairs?" Lenora asked suspiciously. "You did not come up with him."

"I am driving the professor in his automobile," Craig explained. "It occurred to me that if he were going to be long here I should have time to go and order another tire. It is of no consequence, though. I will go down and wait in the car."

Lenora stood at the top of the stairs and watched him disappear. Then she went thoughtfully back to her work. The professor and Quest were talking at the farther end of the room.

"I was in hopes, in great hopes," the professor admitted, "that you might have heard something. I promised to call at Mrs. Rheinholdt's this afternoon."

Quest shook his head.

"There is nothing to report at present, Mr. Ashleigh," he announced.

"Dear me," the professor murmured, "this is very disappointing. Is there no clue, Mr. Quest—no clue at all?"

"Not a ghost of one," Quest acknowledged. "I am as far off solving the mystery of the disappearance of your skeleton and Mrs. Rheinholdt's necklace as I have ever been."

The professor took a courteous leave of them all and departed. Lenora crossed the room to where Quest was seated.

"Mr. Quest," she asked, "do you believe in inspiration?"

"I attribute a large amount of my success," Quest replied, "to my profound belief in it."

"Then let me tell you," Lenora continued, "that I have one, and a very strong one. Do you know that when I went to the door a few minutes ago

the professor's servant, Craig, was there, listening?"

"Inspector French has had his men watching Craig ever since the night of the robbery," quietly remarked Quest. "What's that? Answer the telephone, Lenora."

Lenora obeyed.

"It's Inspector French," she announced. "He wants to speak to you."

Quest nodded and held out his hand for the receiver.

"Hello, French!" he exclaimed. "Anything fresh?"

"Nothing much," was the answer. "One of my men, though, who has been up Mayton avenue way, brought in something I found rather interesting this morning. I want you to come round and see it."

"Go right ahead and tell me about it," Quest invited.

"You know we've been shadowing Craig," the inspector continued. "Not much luck up till now. Fellow seems never to leave his master's side. We have had a couple of men up there, though, and one of them brought in a curious-looking object he picked up just outside the back of the professor's grounds."

"What is the thing?" Quest asked.

"Well, I want you to see whether you agree with me," French went on. "If you can't come round, I'll come to you."

"No necessity," Quest replied. "We've got over little difficulties of that sort. Laura, just tack on the phototelesme," he added, holding the receiver away for a moment. "One moment, French: There that's right," he added, as Laura, with deft fingers arranged what seemed to be a sensitized mirror to the instrument.

"Now, French, hold up the article just in front of the receiver. There, that's right. Hold it steady. I've got the focus of it now. Say, French, where did you say that was found?"

"Just outside the professor's back gate," French grunted. "But you're not kidding me—"

"It's a finger from the professor's skeleton you've got there," Quest interrupted.

Quest hung up the receiver. Then he turned toward his two assistants.

"Another finger from the professor's skeleton," he announced, "has been found just outside his grounds. What do you suppose that means?"

"Craig," Lenora declared confidently.

"Craig on your life," Laura echoed. "Say, Mr. Quest, I've got an idea."

Quest nodded.

"Go right ahead with it."

"Didn't the butler at Mrs. Rheinholdt's say that Craig belonged to a servant's club up town? I know the place well. Let me go and see if I can't join and pick up a little information about the man. He must have a night-out sometimes. Let's find out what he does? How's that?"

"Capital!" Quest agreed. "Get along, Laura. And you, Lenora," he added, "put on your hat. We'll take a ride towards Mayton avenue."

CHAPTER IX.

The exact spot where the bones of the missing skeleton was discovered, was easily located. It was about twenty yards from a gate which led into the back part of the professor's grounds. Quest wasted very little time before arriving at a decision.

"The discovery of the bones so near the professor's home," he decided, "cannot be coincidence only. We will waste no time out here, Lenora. We will search the grounds. Come on."

It was hard to know which way to turn. Every path was choked with tangled weeds and bushes. They wandered about almost aimlessly for nearly half an hour. Then Quest came to a sudden standstill. Lenora gripped his arm. They had both heard the same sound—a queer, crooning cry, half plaintive, half angry.

"What's that?" he exclaimed.

Lenora still clung to his arm.

"I hate this place," she whispered.

"It terrifies me. What are we looking for, Mr. Quest?"

"Can't say that I know exactly," the latter answered, "but I guess we'll find out where that cry came from. Sounded to me uncommonly like a human effort."

They had made their way up as

far as the hedge, which they skirted for a few yards until they found an opening. Then Quest gave vent to a little exclamation. Immediately in front of them was a small hut, built apparently of sticks and bamboos, with a stronger framework behind. The sloping roof was grass-grown and entwined with rushes. The only apology for a window was a queer little hole set quite close to the roof.

There was a rude-looking door, but Quest, on trying it, found it locked. They walked around the place, but found no other opening. All the time from inside they could hear queer scuffling sounds. Lenora's cheeks grew paler.

"Must we stay?" she murmured. "I don't think I want to see what's inside. Mr. Quest! Mr. Quest!"

She clung to his arm. They were opposite the little aperture which served as a window, and at that moment it suddenly framed the face of a creature, human in features, diabolical in expression.

"Say, that's some face!" he remarked. "I'd hate to spoil it."

Even as he spoke it disappeared.

"We've got to get inside there, Lenora," he announced, stepping forward.

She followed him silently. A few turns of the wrist and the door yielded. Keeping Lenora a little behind him, Quest gazed around eagerly. Exactly in front of him, clad only in a loin cloth, with hunched-up shoulders, a necklace around its neck, with blazing eyes and ugly, gleaming teeth, crouched some unrecognizable creature, human, yet inhuman, a monkey, and yet a man. There were a couple of monkeys swinging by their tails from a bar, and a leopard chained to a staple in the ground, walking round and round in the far corner, snapping and snarling every time he glanced towards the newcomers. The creature in front of him stretched out a hairy hand towards a club, and gripped it. Quest drew a long breath. His eyes were set hard.

"Drop that club," he ordered. The creature suddenly sprang up. The club was waved around his head.

"Drop it," Quest repeated firmly. "You will sit down in your corner. You will sleep."

The club slipped from the hairy fingers. The tense frame, which had been already crouched for the spring, was suddenly relaxed. The knees trembled.

"Back to that corner," Quest ordered, pointing.

Slowly and dejectedly, the ape-man crept to where he had been ordered and sat there with dull, non-comprehending stare. It was a new force, this, a note of which he had felt—the superman raising the voice of authority. Quest touched his forehead and found it damp. The strain of those few seconds had been intolerable.

"I don't think these other animals will hurt," he said. "Let's have a look around the place."

The search took only a few moments. The monkeys ran and jumped around them, gibbering as though with pleasure. The leopard watched them always with a snarl and an evil light in his eye.

They found nothing unusual until they came to the distant corner, where a huge piano box lay on its side with the opening turned to the wall.

"This is where the brute sleeps, I suppose," Quest remarked. "We'll turn it around, anyway."

They dragged it a few feet away from the wall, so that the opening faced them. Then Lenora gave a little cry and Quest stood suddenly still.

"The skeleton!" Lenora shrieked. "It's the skeleton!"

It was a skeleton so old that the bones had turned a dull gray. Quest glanced towards the hands.

"Little fingers both missing," he muttered.

"Remember the message?" she exclaimed. "Where the skeleton is, the necklace may be also."

Quest nodded shortly.

"We'll search."

They turned over everything in the place fruitlessly. There was no sign of the necklace.

"You get outside, Lenora," Quest directed. "I'll just bring this beast round again and then we'll tackle the professor."

Quest turned towards the creature, which crouched still huddled up in its corner.

"Look at me," he ordered. The creature obeyed. Once more its frame seemed to grow more virile and natural.

"The Hut, Professor! The Hut is on Fire!"

"You need sleep no longer," Quest said. "Wake up and be yourself."

The effect of these words was instantaneous. Almost as he spoke, the creature crouched for a spring. There was wild hatred in its close-set eyes, the snarl of something fiendlike in its contorted mouth. Quest slipped quickly through the door.

"Anyone may have that for a pet!" he remarked grimly. "Come, Lenora, there's a word or two to be said to the professor. There's something here will need a little explanation."

He lit a cigar as they struggled back along the path. Presently they reached the untidy-looking avenue, and a few minutes later arrived at the house.

Quest searched in vain for a bell. They walked round the piazza. There were no signs of any human life. They came back to the front door. Quest tried the handle and found it open. They passed into the hall.

"Hospital sort of place, anyway," he remarked. "We'll go in and wait, Lenora."

They found their way to the study, which seemed to be the only habitable room. Lenora glanced around at its strange contents with an expression almost of awe.

A small motor car passed the window, driven by Craig. The professor descended. A moment or two later he entered the room. He gazed from Quest to Lenora at first in blank surprise. Then he held out his hands.

"You have good news for me, my friends!" he exclaimed. "I am sure of it. How unfortunate that I was not at home to receive you! Tell me—don't keep me in suspense, if you please—you have discovered my skeleton?"

"We have found the skeleton," Quest announced.

For a single moment the newcomer stood as though turned to stone.

"My skeleton!" he murmured. "Mr. Quest, I knew it. You are the greatest man alive. Now tell me quickly—I want to know everything, but this first of all. Where did you find the skeleton? Who was the thief?"

"We found the skeleton, professor," Quest replied, "within a hundred yards of this house."

The professor's mouth was wide open. He looked like a bewildered child. It was several seconds before he spoke.

"Within a hundred yards of this house? Then it wasn't stolen by one of my rivals?"

"I should say not," Quest admitted. "Where? exactly did you find it?"

"I found it in a hut," Quest said, "hidden in a piano box. I found there, also, a creature—a human being, I must call him—in a state of captivity."

"Hidden in a piano box?" the professor repeated wonderingly. "Why, you mean in Hartoo's sleeping box, then?"

"If Mr. Hartoo is the gentleman who tried to club me, you are right," Quest admitted. "Mr. Ashleigh, before we go any further I must ask you for an explanation as to the presence of that person in your grounds?"

The professor hesitated for a moment. Then he slowly crossed the room, opened the drawer of a small escritoire, and drew out a letter.

"You have heard of Sir William Raymore, the president of the Royal Society?" he asked.

Quest nodded.

"This letter is from him," the professor continued. "You had better read it."

The criminologist read it aloud. Lenora looked over his shoulder:

To Prof. Edgar Ashleigh, New York. My Dear Professor: Your communication gratifies and amazes me. I can say no more. It fell to your lot to discover the skeleton of the anthropoid, a marvelous thing, in its way, and needing only its corollary to form the greatest discovery since the dark ages. Now you tell me that in the person of Hartoo, the last of the Inyamo race of South America, you have found that corollary. You have supplied the missing link. You are in a position to give to the world a definite and logical explanation of the evolution of man. Let me give you one word of warning, professor, before I write you no more. Anthropologists are afflicted more, even, than any other race of scientific men, with jealousy. Guard your secret well, lest the honor of this discovery should be stolen from you. WILLIAM RAYMORE.

The professor nodded deliberately as Quest finished the letter.

"Now, perhaps you can understand," he said, "why it was necessary to keep Hartoo absolutely hidden. In a month's time my papers will be ready. Then I shall electrify the world. I shall write not a new page but a new volume across the history of science. I shall—"

The door was suddenly thrown open.

Craig sprang in, no longer the self-contained, perfect man-servant, but with the face of some wild creature. His shout was one almost of agony.

"The hut, professor! The hut is on fire!" he cried.

His appearance on the threshold was like a flash. They heard his flying feet down the hall, and without a moment's hesitation they all followed. The professor led the way down a narrow and concealed path, but when they reached the little clearing in which the hut was situated, they were unable to approach any nearer. The place was a whirlwind of flame. The smell of kerosene was almost overpowering. The wild yell of the leopard rose above the strange, half-human gibbering of the monkeys and the hoarse, bass calling of another voice, at the sound of which Lenora and even Quest shuddered. Then, as they came, breathless, to a standstill, they saw a strange thing. One side of the hut fell in, and almost immediately the leopard with a mighty spring, leaped from the place and ran howling into the undergrowth. The monkeys followed but they came straight for the professor, wringing their hands. They fawned at his feet as though trying to show him their scorched bodies. Then for a single moment they saw the form of the ape-man as he struggled to follow the others. His strength failed him, however. He fell backwards into the burning chasm.

The professor bade them farewell, an hour later, on the steps of the house. He seemed suddenly to have aged.

"You have done your best, Mr. Quest," he said, "but fate has been too strong. Remember this, though. It is quite true that the cunning of Hartoo may have made it possible for him to have stolen the skeleton and to have brought it back to its hiding-place, but it was jealousy—cruel, brutal, foul jealousy which smeared the walls of that hut with kerosene and set light to it. The work of a lifetime, my dreams of scientific immortality, have vanished in those flames."

He turned slowly away from them and re-entered the house. Quest and Lenora made their way down the avenue and entered the automobile which was waiting for them, almost in silence. The latter glanced toward his companion, as they drove off.

"Say, this has been a bit tough for you," he remarked. "I'll have to call somewhere and get you a glass of wine."

She tried to smile but her strength was almost gone. They drove to a restaurant and sat there for some little time. Lenora soon recovered her color. She even had courage to speak of the events of the afternoon when they re-entered the automobile.

"Mr. Quest," Lenora murmured, "who do you suppose burned the hut down?"

"If I don't say Craig, I suppose you will," he remarked. "I wonder whether Laura's had any luck."

They were greeted, as they entered Quest's room, by a familiar little ticking. Quest smiled with pleasure.

"It's the pocket wireless," he declared. "Let me take down the message."

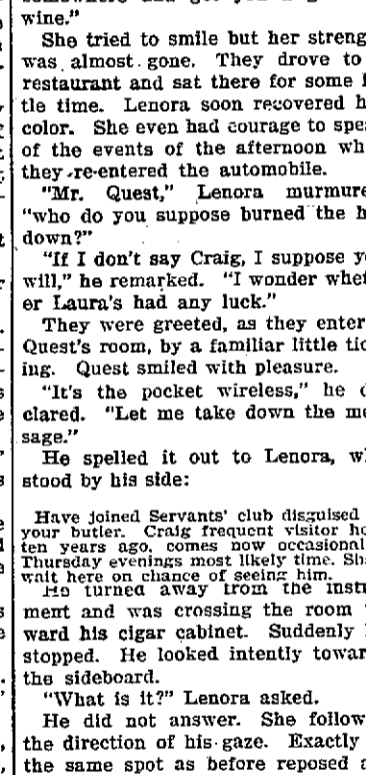

He spelled it out to Lenora, who stood by his side:

Have joined Servants' club disguised as your butler. Craig frequent visitor here ten years ago, comes now occasionally. Thursday evenings most likely time. Shall wait here on chance of seeing him.

He turned away from the instrument and was crossing the room toward his cigar cabinet. Suddenly he stopped. He looked intently towards the sideboard.

"What is it?" Lenora asked.

He did not answer. She followed the direction of his gaze. Exactly in the same spot as before reposed an-

THE FIRST THING A GOOD DOCTOR PRESCRIBES

A good physic and liver stimulant is usually the first remedy prescribed by the physician when called to a case. He does so because he knows that indirectly due to constipation, sluggish liver, etc., therefore his first concern is to reach and remove the probable cause of the illness, and the system, relieved of this poisonous feces, again becomes normal.

And that is exactly the idea behind Santal Laxative Tablets, a remedy for constipation, indigestion, and liver troubles, every ingredient of which has been passed on and approved by an eminent chemist, which you or any of your family may take and which easily and painlessly, but thoroughly and effectively, will cleanse your system, stimulate your liver, thereby ridding your organs and your blood of many of the underlying causes of illness and trouble.

Santal Laxatives contain no calomel. They are mild yet very effective. Do not gripe nor irritate.

We know Santal Laxatives will satisfy you. So positive are we of this that we sell Santals under a broad money-back guarantee, viz.: If in your judgment they do not give you the results you expect, send us the empty box; we will refund your money.

Santals are on sale at your druggist's. Ten doses, 10c. Send for a box, take one tonight and make tomorrow bright. A physician's trial package free, if you mention this advertisement when you write. Santal Remedies Co., 505 Union Central Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

WAYS TO ADD TO ITS EFFICIENCY

Suggestions as to Means by Which
Country Church May Hold Young
People Are Heard

LAST SESSION OF CONFERENCE

Generally Agreed by Speakers That
Rural Church Holds The Key
To The Situation.

LaFayette, Ind., May 13.—Many ways of increasing the efficiency of the country church and thereby strengthening the farm's hold on young people who are so rapidly slipping away to the cities were suggested at the final session of the Rural Ministers' Conference at Purdue University today. It was generally agreed by speakers and listeners that the rural church holds the key to the rural situation and that the problem of making country life as attractive and enjoyable as life in the city or town must be solved by the cooperation of church, school and home. Many excellent ideas were put forth today and the pastors went back to their homes inspired to become community leaders, something more than preachers, actual ministers in every sense of the word.

The importance of boys and girls' clubs in rural communities was emphasized by Z. M. Smith who has charge of this important branch of the Agricultural Extension Department's activities. He urged the ministers to lend a helping hand to this movement. It aims to develop boys and girls into men and women of fine character and therefore its object is directly in line with what the church seeks to accomplish. Character development, he said, is made easy by the processes involved in club work. The principle of the square deal, honest competition, overcoming obstacles, the moral value of productive employment, the intellectual stimulus from learning to do a worthwhile piece of work are some of the elemental qualities of character that are thus developed. He said the minister must get in touch with the problem of the young people and must cooperate with the schools in organizing these boys' and girls' clubs.

Mrs. Charles Sewell of Otterbein discussed "The Church and the Social Needs of Farm Folk". "The country church should be the social center of the rural community" she said. "Our churches fail to accomplish their real purpose when they are opened infrequently and generally kept closed to the people. The church ought to be the common meeting place. The country needs good, efficient churches with all the departments of city churches. It needs churches that will attract the young people. We also need thoroughly equipped pastors with a love of country life in their hearts. We must have the farm folk working harmoniously together. And, lastly, we must have the 'peace that passeth understanding.' Then, and not until then, will the rural church and the farm folk come into their own."

Too much denominationalism is hindering the rural church according to the Rev. O. F. Hall, student pastor at Purdue. The Rev. Hall has had considerable rural experience and has made a study of conditions there. In address on "The Use and Abuse of Denominationalism" today he said: "With few exceptions our religious denominations had their birth in intellectual or temperamental differences, but they now subsist for the most part on sentiment and selfishness. For we have outgrown the causes that brought them into existence. There are in this country 186 recognized denominations and more than 1,000 individualistic and independent churches which disclaim connection with any of the regular divisions. The sheer needlessness of this is made clear by the fact that there are 17 Methodist bodies, 16 Baptist, 12 Presbyterian and 12 Menonite. Without a single change in doctrine or policy these could be cut down to 11 and with a few slight changes to four. The shame of the present condition is that so small number of churches are spending more time and effort trying to hold their own than in overcoming sin and selfishness. The ordinary village would be better served by one church. The overthrow of denominationalism is irresistible."

A discussion of the building and equipment best adapted to modern needs was contributed by the Rev. J. N. McDonald of Savanna, Ill., with the Rev. W. D. Samuels of Bluffton and the Rev. J. J. Wilson of Star City taking part in the discussion. Rev. McDonald said the first need of the country was a playground which he declared was far more important than a burial ground. He urged the building of smaller churches, that is with less auditorium space and more space devoted to institutional work. He said the church of the modern times must be a community workshop.

Dean John H. Skinner of the School of Agriculture of Purdue University spoke on "Education for Leadership in Rural Communities." Prof. Skinner urged a practical understanding of farm and rural life problems combined with a scientific education touching these points. He defined the ideal rural leader and outlined the qualities that made for success in this field.

"The Importance of the Rural Field" was the subject of an address by the Rev. Albert Boynton Storms of the Central Avenue Methodist church, Indianapolis. Dr. Storms is intensely interested in the problem of the rural church and the people depending upon these churches for spiritual and social uplift. He asserted that the increase in farm population has been very small in the last few decades and the country population has changed. The owner of farms is moving to the city while the tenant is taking his place. In the Miami valley in Ohio recent surveys showed from 40 to 50 per cent of the farms operated by tenants.

"The church and school flourish best on good soil," said Dr. Storms. Intensive agriculture seems to result in intensive intelligence and spirituality. While Boone county decreased in population in the decade 1900-1910 6.3 per cent where intensive and scientific agriculture has been highly developed and where land has more than doubled in value in the decade the increase in church membership has increased 10.3 per cent. In the meantime there has been an enormous increase in farm and crop values. Statistics impress us with the economic importance of the country. More capital and enterprise are sure to be enlisted in agricultural pursuits. With the turn of the tide toward the country there will be increasing importance attaching to those institutions which foster the intellectual and spiritual life. The school and church are destined again to come to their former place as social centers of influence and power. The establishment of strong churches as community centers, with settled pastors of skill and with country life enthusiasm, and with breadth of Christian sympathy rather than sectarian zeal, is the need of the hour. The interests of the people must be the interests of the church that would serve the people."

JITNEY CRAZE IS SPREADING

Unless Regulation is Made The Time
Is Approaching When Traction
Companies Will Be Hurt

GARY COMPANY ALREADY HIT

Indianapolis Traction Official Says
They Cannot Survive—Better
Service May Result

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Indianapolis, Ind., May 13.—Unless Indiana has a different experience from that of a score of states, the time is rapidly approaching when the larger cities will be asked to regulate the jitney bus. Although Indiana has been slower than most states to accept the nickel-a-ride auto, the zone of infection is rapidly growing, and it is believed that as summer approaches nearly every city of any size will have its jitney bus.

Already the list of cities possessing the jitney is imposing. Among them are Terre Haute, Jeffersonville, New Albany, Evansville, Peru, Muncie, Gary, Indianapolis, Brazil, Connersville and Rushville. The list is growing so fast it cannot be kept up to date.

The Gary & Interurban Company is the first to indicate that it has been hard hit by the jitney bus. It has requested the Gary city council to grant a conference on a matter vital to the continued operation of their road during the month of June. The road will request that the council pass an ordinance providing a license of several hundred dollars a year for the jitney buses, said a councilman.

The Gary company declares that unless the jitneys are handicapped it will have to discontinue certain service. Gary's jitney bus experience is less than a month in duration. Some of these jitneys have earned $12 a day, it is said.

But various cities profess to see in the jitney bus a real menace. Oakland, Cal., a city of 150,140 population, was the setting for a thorough investigation by a committee from Chamber of Commerce. It drew one conclusion that it considered axiomatic. It declared that a jitney bus cannot operate on a paying basis over a longer route than three miles. The conclusion was that property outside this three mile zone would suffer a tremendous loss if the jitney bus should drive the street cars out of service. The street cars could not operate on a paying basis without the short-haul fares, and thereafter the citizens in the outlying districts would be without transportation.

Under these conditions, it is claimed, the regular street car service, no matter how inadequate it has appeared in the past, would be sorely missed.

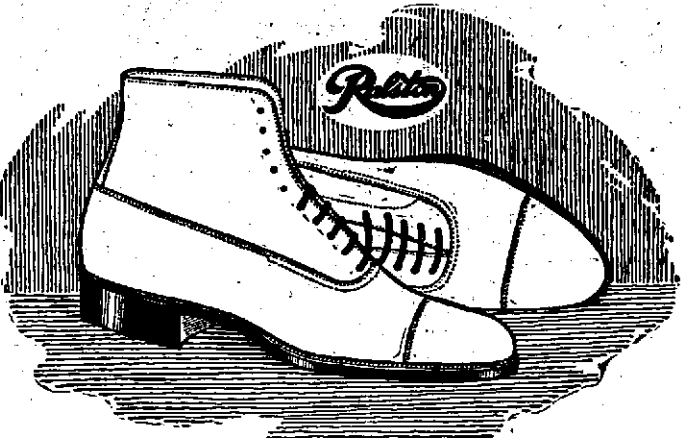

One jitney driver in this city reports that he averages $7 to $8 a day. This is in striking contrast to the report from St. Louis that on April 19 all jitney buses increased their fares from a jitney to 10 cents.

An official high up in the Indianapolis Traction Company was asked his opinion today. He said the jitney could not survive. He teemed with statistics to the effect that the jitney "craze" was losing ground. He was reading a report on the jitney "craze" when the United Press Correspondent walked in. On all sides lay these reports. He had letters from all parts of the country containing jitney statistics.

One thing is certain—the jitney bus infection is being studied by traction magnates. Systematically and thoroughly they are tabulating the reports to determine whether the jitney will menace them long.

This official said the jitney never would affect Indianapolis where street car tickets may be bought for 4 cents. He said, however, that some traction companies might be forced into the hands of the receivers by what he termed "the craze."

He produced statistics to show that in Tennessee, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Maryland, Washington, Rhode Island and Iowa the legislatures have sent to the governors bills that declare the jitney bus a public utility and placed them under the public service commission. Some of the governors have signed the bills.

GOOD WORK DONE TELLS FARMERS TO KEEP STOCK BY RED CROSS

American Society Has Transmitted $379,380 in Cash to Europe and Large Amount of Supplies.

ONLY ONE APPEAL FOR MONEY

Works Better Than the Volunteer Organizations as They Know the Fields and Needs.

By Burton K. Standish.
(Written for United Press.)

Washington, May 13.—Mabel T. Boardman, just now active director of the "infinitely small" work of the American Red Cross, is firmly convinced that persons wishing to aid victims of the war, combatant or non combatant, make a mistake when they fail to make use of the Red Cross.

"A number of volunteer organizations have sprung up," she said, and their purpose is fine. They want to help and they set about in their own way to do it. The trouble is that their work often duplicates our own and that means just that much waste; it means that money is being spent twice for one end, whereas there are so many things crying for relief which we haven't the money to relieve. I think this is in large part due to the failure to understand that the Red Cross will apply funds to any purpose for which it is given. If $5000 is given for a specific piece of relief work it is used for that and the same is true if the sum given is $5. However, if we had planned to spend the same amount of funds already in hand for that work we don't do it, we divert it to another crying need.

"For example, we have transmitted $379,380 in cash to Europe. Of this $197,700 was for purposes designated by the givens, as against $181,680 not designated.

"The Red Cross knows the field better, we believe, than new volunteer organizations can possibly know it; we've got our machinery in operation and are able to make the expense the very minimum. Volunteer organizations, from the very nature of things, incur expenses that are already being borne by the Red Cross and which should not be twice taken from the too meager funds available for relief work.

"I wish people understood this better. I wish they realized that when Congress created the Red Cross acting under the Treaty of Geneva in the creating of a volunteer aid society, it intended that the Red Cross should be the American people's expression of sympathy and the American people's means of helping the stricken whenever need arises. Nothing could be more essentially an institution of the American people and of the American government that is the Red Cross. Probably most people do not know that our accounts, after being audited by the War Department, are reported to Congress, together with detailed statement of our work.

There is evidently something in what Miss Boardman says. The Rockefeller Foundation seems to think so. Such money as it has set aside for war relief work has been turned directly over to the Red Cross to be administered as the Red Cross sees fit. The Foundation, admittedly expert in such matters itself, concedes this field to the Red Cross and to avoid waste and misuse gives the latter the funds, asking only for a receipt for it and no explanation of how used.

But one appeal for financial help has been made, that by President Wilson, as president of the Red Cross, August 13. The response to that thus far has been $1,415,032. More is urgently needed.

Some of the uses to which the money has been put are here indicated:

Cotton, 937,000 pounds; gauze, 832,000 yards; Crenoline, 65,000 yards; bandages, 924,600 pieces; adhesive plaster, 32,500 yards; chloroform and ether 23,100 pounds; medicine, 4,870 pounds; compressed tablets, 680,000; hypodermic tablets, 98,000; disinfectants, assorted, 20,936 pounds; bichloride tablets, 48,000; tincture of iodine, 780 quarts; plaster of paris 18,000

Agricultural Expert Says High Price of corn is no Reason For Getting Rid of Livestock.

GET REPAID IN LONG RUN

Failure of Gas Tractors Are Due Largely to Inefficient Operations, According to Figures

(U. P. Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, May 13.—J. A. Drake, an Agriculture Department correspondent, discussing the problem perplexing many Northern states farmers at this time advises them to hold on to their livestock rather than to sell, despite the high price of corn and the low price of livestock. Conditions have been made worse than usual, he says, by rapid marketing and the inferior quality of stock.

"The conservative farmer who has avoided overstocking while prices were high," says Drake, "generally keeps a good share of his stock when such conditions arise and foregoes the temptation to sell his corn at the high cash price which it will bring. In a short time afterward he usually finds that the price of livestock has come back to normal and he is repaid thus for retaining his stock animals even on high-priced corn."

He believes it is safe to predict that this relative difference will be wiped out gradually.

The case of a family on a 320 acre farm in North Dakota has been cited to the Agriculture Department by W. C. Funk as illustrating the part a woman plays in the successful operation of many farms.

The family averaged seven adults during the year. Four were hired men, the other three being the farmer, his wife and the grown daughter. The latter two did all the house work, caring for an 8-room house, and the laundry work. They canned 300 quarts of fruit and 100 quarts of vegetables and did most of the work in the vegetable garden. Practically all the vegetables consumed were grown in this garden, so, among the important products they prepared for consumption were: 50 bushels of potatoes, 3 bushels of green beans, 4 bushels of green peas, 3 bushels of onions, 400 head of cabbage, 10 bushels of turnips, 6 bushels of beets, 3 bushels of cucumbers, 6 bushels of tomatoes, 36 head of cauliflower, 7 bushels of sweet corn, 1000 pounds of flour, 144 pounds of coffee, 1800 pounds of dressed pork, 200 head of poultry, 520 dozens of eggs and 312 pounds of butter.

Farmers buying gas tractors are advised that 21.9 per cent of all failures are due to inefficient operations, while many cases of inability to get all possible value out of such machines is due to inexperienced handling. It is more important, it is pointed out, that the operator of a heavy tractor know his machine thoroughly than it is for the driver of a pleasure machine. The latter is equipped with a motor with an immense amount of reserve power and need not therefore be maintained at high efficiency to give satisfactory service, while delay for repairs mean chiefly inconvenience, not loss of money as in the case of the farm tractor. It is suggested that farmers' owning tractors will be repaid by taking a course of pounds; surgical instruments, 1573; operating accessories 2998; hospital equipment, 50 cases; field hospital outfits, 423 cases; field medical outfits, 20; ligatures 98,000; antitoxin for typhoid, 20,000 doses; tetanus antitoxin 55,000 doses; smallpox vaccine 10,000 tubes; blankets, 10,280; stretchers 9240; coats, 516; women's and girls' sweaters, 1740; for workers in Serbia, 50 cases; motor ambulances, 19.

These are the supplies purchased. In addition donations aggregate 7,668 cases and 2887 packages of hospital garments, surgeon supplies and clothing, valued at over $500,000. Such donations have been sent to the Red Cross warehouse, donated by the Bush Terminal at Brooklyn and have been packed and prepared for shipping by a force paid by Cleveland Dodge.

training. One generation of well trained operators will disseminate information concerning the operation of gasoline machines so that the future generations will absorb the knowledge as unconsciously and as thoroughly as farmers' sons now learn about horses and their care.

L. A. Moorhouse suggests through an Agriculture Department bulletin that manure spreaders which depreciate in value 11.67 per cent annually on an average, can be used to good advantage in conveying mangolds, sugar beets or turnips from the field to the cellar. A simple adjustment will enable the operator to save considerable time, as well as the task of unloading with a shovel. The cylinder or spreader is first removed from the end of the box and suitable end board is set in place, the latter being held by an iron bar or rod. When the load is taken to the cellar, the end board can be lifted out readily and the roots may be rolled into the trap door merely by putting on the crank which connects with the apron shaft and turning by hand until the entire load is discharged.

RAISING POULTRY For PROFIT

By John Wildg

I am sending you this article from Coal City, Indiana where I am engaged in the installation of a large job of plumbing. At the farm where I am staying they have about 250 White Leghorn hens and a great many chicks. They collect from 160 to 200 eggs each day. All their eggs are shipped to Terre Haute and they receive 21 cents a dozen for them. This person feeds mashed food each morning and mixed grain at night, with all the milk the hens wish to drink. They have the run of the orchard and are comfortably housed. The houses are sprayed occasionally with chloro naphthol two teaspoons full to a half gallon of water. This eliminated the lice and nit, but never spray your houses in the afternoon because this dampness will give your hens cold at night. Spray when the sun is warm in the morning, and the houses will be feely dry by night. In winter you must use your own judgment.

I have been asked several times recently what I consider the best breed of chickens to raise for general purposes. Well, I feel inclined to answer White Wyandotte. However, you must not think that to learn how to care for a flock of chickens you must practice on a mongrel flock, for your experience with them will be both discouraging and misleading and the time and money spent on them might better be spent on birds more worthy of both time and money. Before you decide what breed of fowl to purchase read what you can find about the different breeds. Go to your state fair and poultry shows and study the birds, converse with the exhibitors and don't forget your county fair. Those who have full blooded stock will find it of advantage to show them at our county fair this fall. I expect to show some chickens and I shall be pleased to assist anyone who desires to show their stock. Let us get together and see if we can not improve in the next year the many flocks in our county that are sadly in need of improvement.

As I have said before, do not expect something for nothing. Do not feed much corn in hot weather; it is too fattening. Your hens can not be profitable when fed alone on corn. Vary their diet and feed a little condition powder and you will have little trouble in getting eggs all summer.

political opposition." This statement was made to Horace H. Herr, Editor of the Indiana Daily Times by a prominent German in Berlin on March 4 when the former was in the German capital investigating war conditions for the Indianapolis paper.

Mr. Herr was asked by the United Press to detail the opinion held in Germany concerning the internal difficulties of the United States would experience in case of serious difficulty with Germany. He wrote the following.

BY HORACE H. HERR

(Editor of The Indiana Daily Times)
(Written for United Press.)

If German diplomacy had enjoyed the same efficiency as the German army Kaiser William would not be surrounded by a wall of steel and the sympathy of the neutral nations would not now be alienated from his empire.

The most startling discovery I made while in German Empire last March was the fact that the German people have been led to believe that the 12, 000,000 Germans who have come to the United States in recent years are not at heart loyal citizens of their adopted country.

Germany is a great country to forecast and prepare for possibilities. She assumes in many instances that a possibility is a probability, and in view of what I saw and heard in Frankfurt, Berlin and other German cities, the possibility of the United States being drawn into the war, was considered days before the maelstrom was precipitated.

Germany has acted on the theory, and she is now acting on it, that the United States would be unable to assume an aggressive policy toward her because the 12,000,000 German citizens in this country would not permit such action.

A prominent and intelligent Berlin German said to me on March 4 "We have more than 10,000,000 loyal subjects in the United States, and in deciding on a militant policy towards the German Empire, your government will not only have to reckon with them but may be surprised to find that their alliance with the Irish is strong enough to present serious political opposition."

This statement opened my eyes and I began to sound every German I met, on the subject. Some of them were really laboring under the impression that the revolt of Progressives in 1912 was an incipient rebellion against the government. All of them expressed the conviction that "once a German always a German" would apply to the German American citizens who, in the German understanding, looks upon citizenship in the United States as commercial expedient, a business asset which does not, in any depreciate his loyalty to his Fatherland.

This is the logic of the "Deutschland Uber Alles" creed which has been taught in Germany for generations. This conclusion has been fostered and encouraged by the utterances of some of our Congressmen who have a touch of German blood in their veins for while we at home take their statements and weigh them along with the political effect after which the speaker is striving, Germany looks upon them as the expression of a belligerent element which really threatens our governmental stability. If public officials could appreciate how much mischief a public utterance can make through its effect on a foreign nation, our congressional records would be less voluminous than they are now and quite as interesting.

To put it plainly and frankly Germany seems to be laboring under the impression that before America can attack the German Empire she must first whip the "over 10,000,000 loyal subjects" with which the German mind peoples the United States.

RUSHVILLE PARTY RID OF KIDNEY PAINS

Uses Wonderful New Remedy With Most Remarkable Success.

Mr. J. T. Colecord of 833 West 10th street, Rushville, Ind., says: "Some time ago I began to suffer with Kidney trouble. My Bladder was in a terrible condition and at times pained me a great deal. I would have to get up 8 or 10 times at night. The small of my back gave me a great deal of pain also. Sometimes I could hardly lay down on account of the very distressing pain. For these ills someone recommended Lloyd's Kidney and Rheumatism Tablets to me and I decided to try them. The results were great. I do not suffer any more. I feel so much better that I am glad to tell others of this wonderful new scientific prescription. Don't suffer another day but take my advice and get a box of Lloyd's. I found instant relief."
